TWO SOURCES OF SUPPLY.

Bath, April 7th, 1913.

EDITOR EXPRESS :—

Dear Sir—Partly because there looks to me to be a prospect of proper profit for Bath school from two sources, and partly because I believe that some expect me to answer Mr. Shephard; I will have to ask him to look at matters from my (or our) viewpoint. It is, of course, natural for anyone to look at a case from one's own standpoint, and not so natural to do so from that of the other party. This happens to be intensely so in the present case from a double cause. The idea of the present Government, when it took office, was to, at the same time, increase the efficiency of the schools, and increase the salaries of the teachers; and all its legislation in the matter was directly to this result. It therefore felt its responsibility and obligation to aid the schools, and recognized this obligation by (in the case of rural schools, both public and continuation) giving financial aid directly, and also compelling, by legislation, both the counties and the townships, to extend increased financial aid to the schools. This of course increased (sub rosa) both the county rate of tax as well as the township rate, besides the direct school tax, at one jump.

Now, Bath continuation school, not being rural, but being classed as urban, while it is common with rural schools felt the pressure of the increased salaries and general school expence; and while the Government had exactly the same moral responsibility and obligation (although not formal, or according to the letter of the law) to extend to it financial aid, both directly and by compelling the county to give supplemental aid; Bath school has for some three or four years been deprived of financial subsidy in several ways, to which it was justly morally entitled, both from the Legislature and the County (supplementally.) The fact that the Legislature recognized its obligation to subsidize the schools, both directly and indirectly, is prima facie evidence that it was responsible for the increase in educational expense; and also that it was, and is, (in the same way) morally responsible and obliged to give both direct and indirect subsidy to Bath continuation school, because the increase in school expense affected Bath equally with the rural schools. The government has ample sources of revenue from the forests and mines of New Ontario and from the Dominion subsidy, and it should have, and doubtless has, discretionary power to extend aid where it is so justly, fairly and urgently needed. This train of logical argument (as to the responsibility and obligation of the government,) has so far as I know, never been met or denied or refuted; it cannot be so, every link in it is sound and strong. And not merely the Minister of Education but the whole administration and the legislature are responsible and under obligation. And our member is the one who should press this claim. So it would be well for Mr. Shephard, (as he is in a position been met or denied or refuted; it cannot be so, every link in it is sound and strong. And not merely the Minister of Education but the whole administration and the legislature are responsible and under obligation. And our member is the one who should press this claim. So it would be well for Mr. Shephard, (as he is in a position to do so) to make out a definite statement, in the exact figures, of the amounts of money which Bath continuation school (or part of school) should have, and would have received from the Legislature, (had it been rural) and also from the County, supplementally, and of which amounts it has now been deprived for several years, and to which amounts it is undoubtedly really morally entitled justly, fairly and urgently. Also a comparative statement of the amounts given to other continuation schools in the County by both the Legislature and the County. So that all the people in the county may see exactly how much both the Legislature and the County have been for years (and now are) actually, morally bound to give in subsidy to the Bath Continuation school or class. And also I will write, in both the Mail and Empie and the Globe, an open letter to the Legislature, giving in more detail and system what has been outlined above.

It is to be borne in mind that the eventual full and universal and satisfactory success of its educational policy is the great raison d'être of the present Administration; it stands or falls by that, and as an executive, it is bound, where its legislation has been defective or inoperative, to see that there will be no lamentable failure; (not only by its moral obligation, but by its hope of life.)

And now, to look at matters from my (or our) viewpoint.

It is assumed by some that everyone has a natural or inherent right to education. This is not strictly accurate. Education is a boon, an expedient, a privilege, though not a right. The theory of the province is, that in order for every person to be a good citizen, he should have a good knowledge of the "three R's," reading, writing and arithmetic. To effect this, it deems it a necessary expedient, (not because it is right in itself, to to have a general uniform rate of tax on assessments, (simply because no other feasible plan offers it) to raise the necessary funds. It comes therefore as a privilege (though not as an in-born right,) to those who would not otherwise be able to pay for it. And I have never questioned the expediency of the plan in rural public school sections, however small some assessments might be.

It was not many years ago when the era of hard years and low prices for farm produce and general depression,

The new hats for spring are so different from those of previous seasons that everyone is eager to see them. The display is a brilliant one, for though most of the hats are small, trimmings of vivid color are greatly in evidence. Another point to be noticed is that many of the smartest hats are very lightly trimmed. A tall mount cleverly confected of feathers, flowers, or ribbons, may be all, but, it must be placed "just so," and none but the cleverest and most inspired of milliners can hope to produce the chic and becoming results apparent in these new models.

Olive Hocken, a suffragette, was sentenced in London yesterday to four months for conspiring in connection with an attempt to set fire to a pavilion on the Roehampton golf links.

Feeding Says Home Office.

LONDON, April 8.—That Mrs. Pankhurst is in a critical condition is inferred from the significant fact that Home Secretary McKenna sent a noted specialist to Holloway Jail yesterday to consult with the regular prison physician regarding her case.

But the report that she has been fed by force is officially denied from the Home Office.

Under the new law she can be released on license when exhausted from lack of food and re-arrested when she recovers from the effects of her self-punishment.

It is said that Mrs. Pankhurst has been unable to resist drinking water, but refuses to touch any solid food.

Her followers still expect that she will be present at their big meeting in Albert Hall next Friday.

Mrs. Pankhurst's organization, the Women's Social and Political Union, issued a statement yesterday afternoon declaring that its policy has not changed as a result of Mrs. Pankhurst's imprisonment; that attacks will still be upon property alone; that the members will continue to respect human life, but their warfare on property will be intensified in consequence of the Government's measure of coercion.

Not Distributing Vaccine.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Twenty-five physicians from various parts of the United States and Canada called on Dr. F. F. Friedmann yesterday to learn what arrangements, if any, had been made for the distribution of his vaccine for the treatment of tuberculosis. Dr. Friedmann told them he was making no effort toward this end, and all action in this regard had been taken by persons trying to arrange for control of his treatment. It became known to-day that Dr. Friedmann had engaged an attorney to attend to his business interests and leave him more time for professional work.

the third reading of the bill. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he would take issue with the statement this bill had been before Parliament for a longer period than any Government measure. The resolutions, he said, were down Jan. 26 and were still held up at their initial stage. Parliament was dissolved on March 12, and the bill was the one he took, namely the whole matter to the people to let them decide it.

Sir Wilfrid derided the claim that any conditions demanded a aid from Canada. The emergency became the laughing stock of the country. The truth, he declared, Mr. Borden was firmly committed to a policy of permanent contri-

The Government was destroying the Canadian though it had not the courage to repeal the naval service act. embarked upon a policy of protection. The emergency was make-believe or mask, but purpose of the Government commit Canada to a permanent of contribution.

"If we undertake to take p foreign policy of the Empire decide questions of peace then we must contribute as the common fund as Great which would mean, at the time, a naval budget of 25 for Canada," he said.

The Premier, in replying was disappointed that a more answer had not been returned request and inferred that the was to be indefinitely prolonged the purpose of defeating it bringing on a general election.

"Let me say first, however Borden proceeded, "that I conception most emphatically statement made by the Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) is a permanent policy of contribution, and I deny that it is a policy of the nation. Our proposal is $35,000,000 in the construction of ships which shall belong to the people of Canada, but which the time being placed by the government of Canada at the disposal of His Majesty the King for the defence of the Empire."

Mr. Borden went on to say he would obstruct the present bill which was a defensible course for gentlemen who desired a Canadian a mandate from the people the three dreadnoughts could be plied there would be a generation in Canada, and if it was desired, these ships could be to our shores to form a Canadian navy. April 8.—After over three days of debate for "some way" repeated visits to the office of the leader with suggestions standing, and after finding both fruitless and Premier Borden again asking yesterday afternoon to "press" with his naval proposals. d Laurier said he had to with the statement that d been before the House r period than any other measure. The reciprocity ha said were brought by having a voice in Imperial questions of peace or war, Luis meant, said Mr. Borden, "if it had any meaning, that the Opposition desired Canada to remain neutral when Britain was at war. This had been their position when in power in 1910.

"For my part," he said, "I cannot agree with the doctrine that Canada should be neutral and stand aloof when the Empire is at war, while in peace enjoying all the benefits which flow from the prestige and power of the British flag."

Hon. Wm. Pugsley, who followed, said Canada was being placed on a par with the Malay States and, in closing, challenged the Government to go to the country. "I dare you to go, if that is Parliamentary," he concluded.

Gentlemen on the other side say they want an election," said Hon. Robert Rogers, who was the next speaker. "Well, personally, I'd like to accommodate them. Whatever my other limitations may be, my friends on the other side of the House will admit that I know how to carry elections."

"Why don't I try it," Mr. Rogers said in reply to Opposition questions. "It is because the business men of this country demand that this Government put through this Parliament the business of the country, including this bill and we are going to do it."

E. M. McDonald, the Liberal member for Pictou, followed.

"The Prime Minister," he said, "has abandoned the idea that these ships are to be given to Britain. He says to-day that if the Grits carry the next election we can bring them back and utilize them as a part of the Canadian navy. Let me thank him for nothing: We already know what we will do, but what we want to know is, what will the right hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden) do if he is returned to power? What are his politics? He must favor imperial contribution or a Canadian navy. We are entitled to know where he stands before this money is voted."

SUBSIDY INCREASED.

Transatlantic Mail Bonus Is Enlarged To a Million.

OTTAWA, April 8.—The new subsidy contract between the Dominion Government and the steamship companies for the new Atlantic mail service was continued by Parliament yesterday.

Before the orders of the day, Hon. Mr. Pelletier announced the renewal of the subsidy to the Atlantic mail service steamers. It has been increased from $600,000 to $1,000,000.

"The main provision," he said, "is that we are going to take care of our own ocean mail service with the Mother Country without the need of going outside." Canada had been paying to the United States $185,000 a year. Under the new arrangement, instead of four ships in the service, there will be twelve, and instead of a weekly service there will be a tri-weekly service in summer and bi-weekly in winter.

The million dollar subsidy will include the transportation of mails from England to Canada and vice versa. The mails in summer will be landed at Quebec, and in winter at Halifax.

The summer sailings will be on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, instead of exclusively at the week-end. All mails to and from Canada will be handled by this arrangement. In short the idea is an all-Canadian service.

To tin sheet copper on one side, says The Engineer, metal is taken of the correct gauge or within one number of that size and then cleansed with the usual pickles and by scouring with sand or swarf and sand. The sheets are then coated with a killed spirit flux. They are next placed upon a holder laid at an angle of forty-five degrees to the tinning pot, so that the excess of tin will return by gravity. The molten tin is poured over the copper sheet and any excess wiped off with mops made of plumber's tow. The oxide formed on the reverse side of the sheet from the

THREE DAYS' GRACE.

Montenegro Receives an Ultimatum From the Powers.

LONDON, April 8.—The powers propose that unless Montenegro complies with their wishes in regard to Scutari, the blockade of the Montenegrin ports of Antivari and Dulcigno shall begin in three days.

Austria is urging that the blockade be extended to the Albanian ports occupied by the Servians, that special steps be taken at Belgrade as Servia is now playing the chief role in the siege of Scutari. No decision has been taken on this point as yet.

OFFICES FOR HYDRO.

Provincial Commission To Have a Separate Building.

TORONTO, April 8.—With the expectation of getting an appropriation of $150,000 from the Ontario Government when the estimates are brought down shortly, the Provincial Hydro-Electric Power Commission have planned the construction of new headquarters. It was reported that a site has already been secured on University avenue, but one of the officials stated last night that the location for the proposed office building had not yet been chosen.

There is a likelihood that the T. & N. O. Commission and staff will be housed in the proposed building.

Fear Epidemics After Flood.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Serious epidemics may follow in the wake of the Ohio flood, officials here say, unless state health officers enforce sanitation measures. Major Normoyle yesterday reported to the War Department from Louisville, Ky., that there were sporadic cases of smallpox along the river, generally between Evansville and Paducah.

Kentucky and Indiana, Major Normoyle said, have not been particularly energetic in measures to prevent disease. "We don't want to get in too deep," he added, "but we want to force these states to take proper measures."

Will Ignore Republic.

WASHINGTON, April 8—Great Britain and Japan will not recognize the new Chinese Republic to-day. This became known positively last night, and indications were that Russia, France and Germany also would withhold recognition for the present.

The United States alone of the six-power group which participated in the loan negotiations has declared for recognition of the new Chinese Government, when the constituent assembly meets to-day at Pekin.

Disorder In Buffalo.

BUFFALO, April 8.—Scenes of disorder followed the attempt of the International Railway Co. last night to man its cars with strikebreakers of whom, it is reported, 250 arrived from Philadelphia and other eastern cities to break the strike of the car men called Sunday to secure higher wages and a readjustment of working hours. Comparatively few cars were running.

Raw wool would be made free at once, with a correspondingly heavy reduction on the tariff on all woollen goods.

While wheat flour is put on the free list, a duty of ten per cent. is imposed against countries which levy a duty on American flour.

Wheat imported from Canada under this provision, that was to be used in making export flour, would, therefore, ultimately pay ten cents per bushel tariff, less a refund of all but one per cent. of the ten cents per bushel, making such wheat carry practically no duty.

Canada now has a tariff on flour of sixty cents a barrel, and France, Germany and practically all of the other foreign countries have a tariff on the same articles. Then ten per centum clause against such countries therefore gives American millers a ten per cent. duty against all countries from which they are liable to competition, except from Britain.

All these other articles, are put on the free list, namely:—

Meats, bread, boots and shoes, lumber, coal, harness, saddlery, iron ore, milk and cream, potatoes, salt, swine, corn, cornmeal, cotton bagging, agricultural implements, leather, wood-pulp, Bibles, printing paper not worth more than 2 1/2 cents per pound, typewriters, sewing machines, typesetting machines, cash registers, steel rails, fence wire, cotton ties, nails, hoop and band iron, fish, sulphur, soda, tanning materials, acetic and sulphuric acids, borax, lumber products, including broom handles, clapboards, hubs for wheels, posts, laths, pickets, staves, shingles.

These principal items are taken from the free list and taxed.

Rough and uncut diamonds and precious stones, furs, coal tar products, ten per cent.; volatile oils, twenty per cent.; spices one cent to two cents per pound.

The First Pincers.

The lobster's claw is said to be the original gasfitter's pincers. There are many other pincer carrying animals, especially the scorpions, and among these we can find nearly as great a variety as in the hardware shop. Shears and scissors are very similar in operation to the pincers, and we find a number of creatures carrying such tools. The earwigs, for instance, carry a pair of forceps as skillfully constructed as any a dentist uses. The power of the big pincers of a crab or lobster's claw is well known, and some of the modern instruments used for gasfitting are based on principles of construction somewhat similar.

Knew Only One Kind of Weight.

The young father was rejoicing visibly over the advent of his first son. Early in the morning he was proudly in evidence at the front gate when the iceman appeared.

"Twenty-five pounds?" inquired the iceman.

"No," said the excited parent; "eight and three-quarters."

by gravity. The molten tin is poured over the copper sheet and any excess wiped off with mops made of plumber's tow. The oxide formed on the reverse side of the sheet from the heat of the molten tin is removed by dilute sulphuric acid pickles. The sheets are washed and dried and then if necessary rolled again to gauge and polished. For cleansing tinned articles there is nothing better than whiting mixed with a little kerosene oil, the surface being polished afterward with a little of the dry whiting or Vienna lime.

Preserving Dry Batteries.

The life of dry batteries, which are to be used in wet or damp places, may be considerably lengthened by being treated in the following manner:

The batteries are placed in glass jars a little wider and higher than themselves. A layer of dry sawdust is placed in the bottom for the battery to rest on, and the sides are packed with sawdust to within half an inch of the top. Waterproof wires are connected to the binding posts, and melted paraffin poured over the battery to the top of the jar. The carbon and zinc terminals should be marked to avoid trouble when connecting several cells together. Batteries treated in this manner are waterproof and can be submerged in water if necessary.

A Ring Island.

Many coral reef islands in the Pacific are in the form of more or less perfect rings or ovals, inclosing lagoons. The ring island of Ninafou, halfway between Fiji and Samoa, is not a coral reef, but a volcanic ring inclosing a crater containing a lake two miles in diameter. Toward the sea the ring is bordered with walls of black lava, and on the inner side these break down in cliffs 200 to 300 feet in height. An eruption in 1886 formed a peninsula on the eastern side of the lake. While the ocean outside is trembling and thundering under a heavy wind the lake remains smooth or is simply wrinkled with ripples.

Richmond, N. S., since it was at the solicitation of his defeated Tory opponent, J. A. Gillies, that the scandal arose, owing to the government's plan of helping defeated candidates by giving them local patronage and the influence to remove Liberal office holders to make room for their own friends.

Mr. Kyte produced letters and documents to show that in December 1911 Capt. D. R. Boyle, an efficient, but Liberal, fisheries inspector was summarily dismissed on the usual charge of partisanship. His dismissal was demanded by Mr. Gillies, who asked that Capt. Landry be substituted. A few days later Father Boucher, parish priest at Descomes, wrote Hon. Mr. Hazen, protesting against this, and asking, "Would you think a man who had a case pending against him for forging notes worthy of public office and our confidence?"

Boyle was dismissed, but, despite the defeated candidate's demands Landry was not appointed his successor, although Hon. Mr. Hazen wrote him regarding the Boucher letter, showing he knew this was the Landry accused of forgery. But Landry had to get the job. The Liberal wharfinger at Descomes was dismissed and on Dec. 19th, 1911, Landry the forger was appointed in his place—five days after Father Boucher's letter of protest.

On June 5th following Landry was convicted on four charges of forgery, and sentenced to a year in jail. Seven days before this sad event on application of the same defeated Conservative candidate Capt. Poirier, a Liberal was deprived of his contract for looking after government buoys at Descomes and the contract turned over to Captain Landry, the pay to be $240 a year. Two days after Landry had taken up residence in the county jail at Arichat, Poirier was instructed to turn over to him all his government stores. He wrote the department regretting his inability to do so, since he could not take the buoys to jail to deliver them up.

Such a trifling as a jail sentence however was not allowed to deprive the country of Landry's services, and his friends boasted he would soon be free and back on the job. The department made arrangements to replace him, but the local patronage monger wrote asking delay, as Landry would be home in a few days. This was less than a month after Landry started his year's sentence.

Then the Department of Justice came in. Petitions were sent the Minister declaring that Landry's family needed his support, and that his health was so bad he might die unless immediately released for an operation. No particular effort was made to discover the facts, and on August 3rd Landry was released by Hon. Mr. White, Acting Minister of Justice, thus serving 60 days instead of a year.

With freedom came a marvellous recovery. Instead of going to a hospital to have his life saved by an operation Landry hastened to Descomes and started an operation to raise money as government wharfinger, his first step being to send out a bill for $30, which he offered on behalf of the government to compromise for $10 spot cash.

Shortly after he dropped the government service and went on a job at the Sydney Steel Works, where his health gave no indication of the danger which so opportunely rescued him from jail. All these facts were laid by Mr. Kyte, and Hon. Mr. Hazen's reply was that it never occurred to him that Capt. A. Landry of Descomes Village, rejected as fisheries inspector on account of forgery, could be Capt. Andrew Landry of Descomes, about the same time appointed wharfinger, although both were made on recom-

Price bargained for by Mr. Pelletier in lots of 350,000.....	$1.00
Hon. Mr. Pelletier when interpellated by Hon. Mr. Lemieux on March 19, as to who the locks were bought from—
“From a firm in Ottawa. They were the lowest tenders.” On March 31, Mr. Pelletier admitted tenders were never called for.
The contract entered into by Mr. Pelletier was with a company specially organized for the purpose at Ottawa, alleged to be composed of his political friends.—Premier Borden refuses an investigation.
Is this honest government?

Ottawa, April 5th, 1913.—Grave charges involving allegations of extensive graft in the Post Office Department under the administration of Hon. Mr. Pelletier were brought up in the House on Tuesday by Hon. Rudolphe Lemieux, ex-Postmaster General. So serious were these charges that in introducing them Hon. Mr. Lemieux declared—“It is clear we are this evening in the presence of a huge graft, of a mammoth boodle. This he stated was on a purchase of 350,000 mail-bag locks and keys for the Post Office Department, at $1 a set. Hon. Mr. Lemieux showed that this single purchase more than doubled the entire number of such locks bought by the Department since Confederation, and said he was informed that the deal involved a syndicate of Mr. Pelletier’s political friends, including his nephew, and concluded by demanding a thorough investigation.

This was plainly distasteful to the Government and Premier Borden in reply refused to grant an investigation until what he styled “intelligible charges” were made. That the charges were intelligible was shown by Hon. Mr. Lemieux’s statement.

When the Post Office estimates came up on March 19th, Hon. Mr. Lemieux was informed by Mr. Pelletier that 350,000 of these locks and keys had been bought for the use of his Department for $1.00 per set and that they were to be made by an Ottawa firm who were the lowest tenderers.

Later the story of this transaction was partially ventilated in the press and on April 1st, Hon. Mr. Lemieux gave out in full detail in Parliament, remarking, “I say that this is one of the worst boodling cases that has ever come before Parliament.”

The Ex-Postmaster General showed that during his term of office the number of such locks purchased had averaged about 9,000 per year. But within a few months of the Hon. Mr. Pelletier’s assuming the Department an order was given the Ontario Equipment Company for 11,162, and on October 26th, 1912, a further contract with the same firm for 350,000 was made. Although the old style of locks had been doing such good service that no complaints were heard, and mail robberies were practically unknown, the new Postmaster-General suddenly discovered that the old locks were “rotten” and could be opened with a jack-knife or railway switch key and that the public safety demanded they be replaced by a new patent lock. These locks, said Hon. Mr. Lemieux, were purchased from a firm alleged to be composed of political friends of the was informed, included Hon. Mr. Pelletier’s nephew.

Hon. Mr. Pelletier’s defence was that he did not know all the members of the firm, and that anyway the price had been fixed by Mr. Lemieux in 1907, —ignoring the fact that this price was for $5,000, while he was demanding 70 times as many. When the matter came up a second time Hon. Mr. Pelletier produced the contract and declared that under it the Government was not bound to buy one lock—although it was a special patent for mail bags, and the Company before it could get the contract had to put up $10,000 bonds.

The effect of Mr. Pelletier’s declaration that the old style of lock was “rotten” was ruined by interruption from Mr. MacKenzie who declared that last Fall, he had defended a mail carrier in a strenuously contested criminal case in which the leading officials of the Post Office Department were concerned, and although the main matter at issue was whether the mail bag was opened or not he never heard any intimation that there was anything the matter with the locks.

Apparently the whole thing sifts itself down to this: For sixteen years a form of lock had been found satisfactory to the Department and no complaints were heard. The needs of the Department average about 9,000 locks per year until 1911. Then Hon. Mr. Pelletier became Postmaster-General in the Borden Government. Suddenly the old style of lock became “rotten,” without securing any tenders an agreement was made for the purchase of Mr. Pelletier himself said of 350,000 new locks at the same price as was paid for small orders of the old.

It was stated in the House by the Ex-Minister that his information was that the whole thing had been engineered by a syndicate of party friends of the Postmaster-General including his nephew and that this unprecedented order involved enormous graft.

Yet when the Ex-Minister from his seat made such grave charges and offered to produce his evidence if an investigation were granted, he was denied it by Mr. Borden who demanded production of evidence to make an “intelligible charge.”

The Opposition had not forgotten what happened between the time Mr. Gauthier made his charges in connection with Hon. Mr. Coderre by-election and the time when he was allowed to bring it up in Parliament. They wisely refused to place their evidence in the hands of the Government except on oath before a properly constituted investigation Committee.

LIKE FORGERS IN PUBLIC SERVICE.

Once again have the Tories and Nationalists united to express their complete approval of the manner in which Capt. Andrew Landry, the convicted forger of Descoues was appointed to government office while still in jail, and then liberated, apparently so that he could take up his work.

This complaint was brought up by Mr. G. W. Kyte, Liberal member for Capt. A. Landry of Descoues Village, rejected as fisheries inspector on account of forgery, could be Capt. Andrew Landry of Descoues, about the same time appointed wharfinger, although both were made on recommendation of the same defeated candidate.

This is an illuminating sample of how the Borden Government tries not to carry out its Halifax Platform promise—“The appointment of public officials upon considerations of capacity and personal character alone, and not of party service alone.”

Mr. Kyte tried to enforce that high principle, and moved a vote of censure of this proceeding. Premier Borden and 82 of his followers united to vote approval of the business.

LURE OF THE CIRCUS.

Hold of the Music and Sawdust Odor Upon Old Performers.

Sometimes I think there must be two distinct varieties of humanity said an old circus man, one of which we might call the rovers and the other the stay at homes. With my own taste for roving it was hard for me to understand that ninety-nine persons in every hundred are content to stay in one place most of their lives and even are unhappy if taken out of it, but there are such people, and they are the vast majority. The rover, who is one man or woman in a hundred, likes to wander and is unhappy if confined to one place. Probably if it were not for him there would be no circus. Love of the road has a strong hold on all the circus people, from performers to canvasmen and drivers. “When you hear the band play you join out!” is the way they put it themselves, and once I had a striking illustration of this.

I was checking window paper in a small town and came to a fine plate glass front. It was the best tailoring establishment there and ordinarily would have been passed by the lithographer as unobtainable, but it had a single sheet of our paper and I went in to take up the order. It developed that the tailor’s brother was a rover and had tramped with circuses as a bandsman—a windjammer, in the vernacular. His influence had put that lithograph there, and he chatted with me.

“You won’t catch me round here to tomorrow, Mike, while that show is in town!” he said. “If I saw as much as a side wall half a mile off I’d be joining out again! No, sir! I’m going up into the country tonight. My brother pays me good wages here, and there’s nothing in troupin’.”

A week later I dropped back to the show. It was 10 in the morning, and the parade was just leaving the lot. Somebody shouted, “Hey there, Mike!” from the big band wagon, and on going nearer I saw the tailor’s brother, seated among the other windjammers, with a red and gold coat, a plumed hat and his cornet.

“I thought you were going up into the country.”

“Forget it!” he replied. “I didn’t go. He had heard the band play.

Circus people are of all sorts—old and young, Americans and foreign born, well paid performers and bosses and ne’er do well hostlers, canvasmen and razorbills. From time to time they will turn and denounce their calling, just like other people. In fact, I

The great archaeological Sir William Ramsay, considered the city in the world to be of Iconium, or Konia, as is to-day. The modern Iconium much to interest the probably no place in all could leave a more lasting upon one’s mind.

FASTIDIOUS AUTHORS.

Campbell Took a Twelve Mile Tramp to Change a Comma.

It is surprising how punctilious some authors have been with respect even to the smallest detail of their manuscripts. Dickens was a perfect terror and would make enough fuss over an error of punctuation to drive a poor "comp" out of his wits.

Tennyson, too, was most particular that not a comma should be omitted or misplaced, while his revisions were never finished. Perhaps the greatest terror of the compositor was Thomas Carlyle, for he would cover every square inch of vacant space, both in the margin and between the lines, with minute additions and emendations, and not once, but a dozen times.

Victor Hugo was equally difficult to please and satisfy. Of one of his famous works he made the printers supply no fewer than eleven successive revised proofs, and the last half dozen were furnished in order to make quite sure that the commas were in their right places.

But perhaps Thomas Campbell, the famous poet who wrote such stirring

ORPHANS IN AUSTRALIA.

They Are All Wards of the State and Carefully Protected.

There are no orphans in Australia. That is not because parents never die there, but because when they do the state at once steps in to the rescue of their little ones. Children who have been robbed by death of their natural protectors are practically adopted by the government.

Unless some near relative manifests a desire to assume the responsibility and can demonstrate his ability to do so the child is committed to the children's council, which selects some home among the farmers of the country. These foster homes are examined closely, and often two or three are tried before one is found in which the child finds congenial surroundings.

After thirteen the state feels that its ward should earn more than board and lodging. At that age, therefore, he is hired out, usually, however, to the foster parents who have been previously taking care of him. Three-fourths of his wages are deposited in savings banks; the remainder is his. When he becomes of age or if he wishes money in order to learn a trade or to attend a more advanced school—or, in the case of a girl, when she wishes to marry—the savings are turned over to the ward.—New York World.

FATE OF THE GRIZZLY.

The Tenderfoot Was Anxious to Get the Full Particulars.

An Idaho guide whose services were retained by some wealthy young easterners desirous of hunting in the northwest evidently took them to be the greenest of tenderfeet, since he undertook to chaff them with a recital something as follows:

"It was my first grizzly, so I was mighty proud to kill him in a hand to hand struggle. We started to fight about sunrise. When he finally gave up the ghost the sun was going down."

At this point the guide paused to note the effect of his story. Not a word was said by the easterners, so the guide added very slowly, "for the second time."

"I gather, then," said one young gentleman, a dapper little Bostonian, "that it required a period of two days to enable you to dispose of that grizzly."

"Two days and a night," said the guide, with a grin. "That grizzly died mighty hard."

"Choked to death?" asked the Bostonian.

"Yes, sir," said the guide.

"Pardon me," continued the Hubbite, "but what did you try to get him to swallow?"—Lippincott's.

In London Clubland.

In some of the ultra exclusive clubs, says the London Tatler, it is a serious breach of etiquette for one member to speak to another without obtaining a ceremonious introduction beforehand. A painful case has just occurred in a certain old established and extremely respectable Pall Mall caravansary. It appears that a newly joined member in callous defiance of custom ventured the other afternoon to make a remark about the weather to a gentleman with whom he was not personally acquainted. The recipient of this outrage

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health
by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion." — Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont.—"I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble.

"My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated.

"I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial." — Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

A LAND OF WHITE HOUSES.

Buildings In Bermuda Are All of Whitewashed Coral.

The most striking things about a Bermudian house are its color and material. White does not begin to express the vivid, radiant, penetrating purity of its smooth, unbroken surfaces. In the intense sunlight the dazzling roofs give forth a halo of reflected light where the roof line instead of standing out sharply against the sky blends imperceptibly with it.

Bermudian houses are built today, as they were centuries ago, of coral blocks literally sawed out of the hillsides. A Bermudian quarry is a queer institution. For convenience it is usually located on the side of a hill where only a thin layer of soil covers the coral. The blocks are sawed out by negroes with long, coarse toothed hand-saws and cut in uniform sizes measuring about two feet long, one foot wide and six inches thick. The roofs are covered with overlapping slabs an inch thick.

When taken from the quarry these coral blocks and slabs are very soft, vised proofs, and the last half dozen were furnished in order to make quite sure that the commas were in their right places.

But perhaps Thomas Campbell, the famous poet who wrote such stirring masterpieces as "Hohenlinden," "The Battle of the Baltic" and "Ye Mariners of England," takes the cake in this respect. He was fastidious to a degree, which fact probably accounts for the small quantity and perfect quality of his literary output. It is said that he once walked six miles to his printers and six miles back in order to have a comma changed into a semicolon.

But an equally careful and fastidious literary workman owed a great improvement in the opening line of his most famous poem to a printer. This was Thomas Gray, whose "Elegy Written In a Country Churchyard" is probably the best known poem in the English language. Its first line reads, "The curfew tolls the knell of parting day," but when Gray sent it to the press his manuscript read, "The curfew tolls, the knell of parting day."

The thoughtful compositor did not understand the word "tolls" as an intransitive verb, so dropped the comma, thinking the poet had put it in by mistake, and when Gray read the line his sensitive ear at once caught its new, sustained melody, and he adopted the compositor's correction.

appears that a newly joined member in callous defiance of custom ventured the other afternoon to make a remark about the weather to a gentleman with whom he was not personally acquainted. The recipient of this outrage glared stonily at its perpetrator.

"Did you presume to address me, sir?" he demanded, with an awful frown.

"Yes, I did," was the defiant reply. "I said it was a fine day." The other digested the observation thoughtfully.

Then, after an impressive pause, he turned to its bold exponent. "Well, pray don't let it occur again," he remarked as he buried himself once more in his paper.

A Knocker That Meant Life.

So cruel were some of the punishments meted out to criminals in England centuries ago that it was small wonder the poor wretches claimed the "right of sanctuary." If they reached a church or some other privileged place the law could not touch them. A curious relic in connection with this custom exists today in the form of the quaint knocker on the door of Durham cathedral. The applicant having hammered at the portal, one of the persons inside would inspect him through the eyes of the copper mask above the knocker and after due parley would admit the frightened criminal.

Natural Tweezers.

Indian tweezers are simply a small pair of clamshells, with edges clean and hinge unbroken. "The old time Indians," writes Ernest Thompson Seton in "The Book of Woodcraft and Indian Lore," "had occasionally a straggly beard. They had no razor, but they managed to do without one. As a part of their toilet for special occasions they pulled out each hair by means of the clamshell nippers."

His Point of View.

Landlord—Sir, the other tenants will not stay in the flat if you insist on playing the cornet. Mr. Toots—I'm glad of that. They were very annoying.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are just the right medicine for the children. When they are constipated—when their kidneys are out of order—when over-indulgence in some favorite food gives them indigestion—Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills will quickly and surely put them right. Purely vegetable, they neither sicken, weaken or gripe, like harsh purgatives. Guard your children's health by always keeping a box of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills in the house. They are six inches thick. The roofs are covered with overlapping slabs an inch thick.

When taken from the quarry these coral blocks and slabs are very soft, but after being piled up for a month or so and exposed to the air they become hard and firm. Even then, however, the coral is porous, so that all Bermudian houses are covered with a thick coat of whitewash or lime a quarter of an inch deep. This hides all cracks and joints and gives the surface a beautiful, smooth finish. To keep the houses in good condition a coat of whitewash is applied each year.

What little wood is used for floors, verandas, interior trim and shutters can be obtained from the cedar trees that grow on the same hills where the stone is quarried. With material so handy and ready for use with so little work it does not cost much to build in Bermuda. In some of the older houses and churches the cedar beams are locked into the masonry exactly as a ship-builder would do it. Big chimneys, sloping roofs to catch the rainwater, stone porches and windows filled with green shutters that push outward are features common in many Bermudian houses.—Country Life In America.

PERSIAN RIVERS.

They Take a New Name at Every Town Upon Their Banks.

In Persia a river is generally called by the name of the town on its banks, and therefore changes its name at each town it reaches. "This," writes Colonel Stewart in "Through Persia In Disguise," "makes it very difficult to learn the right names of the rivers.

"My groom was an Armenian and very much more intelligent than ordinary Persians, since he had been educated at a mission school at Ispahan. One day he was swimming about in some water we passed, and I said to him, 'No doubt you learned to swim in the Zayendeh Rud—the river that flows by Ispahan.' 'No, sir,' he replied, 'I did not learn to swim in the Zayendeh Rud, but in the Ispahan river.' He actually did not know that the large river passing his native town was called the Zayendeh Rud, or, in other words, that the Ispahan river and the Zayendeh Rud were one and the same.

"Another instance of this confusion is shown by what people call the Abrishmi river. The name of this river is the Kal Mura, but the majority of Persians and also Europeans cross it on the main post road between Meshed and Teheran by a bridge that was built by a silk merchant and that is called 'Pul-Abrishmi,' or the silken bridge; so they call the river the 'Abrishmi' or the silken river, which is certainly not its name. The river, which flows by Khusf, although at this point very slightly brackish, lower down becomes very salt indeed and finally is lost in the desert.

"Karez, or underground canals, carry the water of this river in every direction over the country. I think the wonderful patience shown by the Persians in the labor of excavating these underground channels for water is surprising. Every drop of water has to be bored for and tunneled through miles and miles of ground before the precious liquid reaches the crop for which it is intended."

A meeting of the Athletic Club was held on Tuesday afternoon, for the purpose of balancing up the financial matters resulting from the hockey season. At the meeting it was decided that a word of appreciation be given to those eighty-four men, who so generously contributed the funds, which amounted to $60.61. The interest shown by these men has done much to enable the N. C. I. to place herself at the high position which she holds in inter-collegiate hockey. At the meeting it was also decided that a vote of thanks be given to Russell Williams and Archie Babcock, who so kindly took upon themselves the duty of collecting this money and who so successfully carried it through. A look at the hockey season shows the N. C. I. winning nine out of eleven games. A very good showing for the first year. G. A. W. D. (Picton papers please copy.)

Pruning and Spraying Demonstrations.

Mr. G. B. Curran, of the Agricultural Office, Napanee, has arranged to hold a series of pruning and spraying demonstrations at various points over the county. For list of orchards where demonstrations will be held see advt. in this issue. Every farmer who has an orchard should attend these meetings and learn how to take care of the trees. Good fruit cannot grow on a tree unless it be properly trimmed and sprayed. Mr. Leslie Smith, Wellington, is the pruning expert sent by the Fruit Branch. Thousands of apple trees in this County are dying from black rot canker. This disease produces blackened condition of the trunk of the apple tree, and the fungus gradually kills the tree by preventing the sap flow. As soon as the trunk is ringed the tree dies. To hold this disease in check, the Fruit Branch recommends to cut out and burn all dead trees and limbs, and to spray the remaining trees and limbs with strong Lime-Sulphur solution, in the dormant stage before the buds open. The smaller cankers can be cut off with a draw knife, and the wound painted over with coal-tar or white lead, to prevent infection. The disease can only enter a tree through broken bark, caused by sun scald, bruises or pruning cuts. All interested in the care and culture of orchards are invited to be present at one of these demonstrations.

How to Make Lime-Sulphur So

A great many fruit growers make their own Lime Solution, instead of buying prepared, as the cost is only half for material. The apparatus required is a large iron kettle barrels. The kettle is hung. The best formulae is as follows:

Lime (1 bag).....
Water (1 bag).....

Dump the bag of sulphur in a tub, add a little water, and mix into a milky paste. Put a few water into the potash kettle, warm, and add the lime. A it stops slacking pour in sulphur and stir. Add the remainder of the water, and heat. B hour. The mixture will turn from a yellowish hue to red color. The one barrel made Lime-sulphur should be 1 to 8 for dormant spraying for spraying after the blossoms. The sulphur, for the barrel sulphur costs $2.50 per bag and the lime 25 cts. a bushel, & of less than $3.00 per barrel. For further particulars as to the Lime-Sulphur and spraying trees apply to Mr. G. B. Cur cultural Office, Napanee.

W. C. T. U.

At a dinner given recent by the Scientific Department of the U. of Columbus, Ohio, there were as guests many of the manufacturers of that state. These men spoke at the dinner upon the subject of working-man and alcohol. These men had wide experience in working men as employers of large numbers and all agreed as to the effect of alcohol had on efficiency of any working man. Attention was called to the fact that the handling of the machine day, self-control and alert demanded and that the after indulgence in alcoholic drink was an unwonted languor and in this after-effect often led to bodily injury on the part of man himself. Attention was given to the fact that according to official statistics of both Germany and the United States there was a larger percentage of accident day than any other day in the year. The reason for this was that the workmen were from the effects of a week-long bout, for, now-a-days, the workmen in the majorities are not allowed to apply for intoxication and Saturday holiday is their usual time for indulgence of this taste. All manufacturers agreed that for employees alike, prohibition is a great boon.

THE LATE MRS. HAMM.

Daughter of Officer of Fort Henry
During 1837 Rebellion.

The last member of an old and highly respected family was Mrs. Caroline Hamm, who passed away on April 5th at the home of her son, J. Bailey Hamm, of Morven. The deceased lady was in her eight-ninth year, and very active all her life, always in perfect health until a few hours before being stricken by death. She was a lifelong Methodist and was wholly resigned to her Master's will. Conscious that the end was near, the family hastened to the bedside of their aged mother, who was passing peacefully away.

Deceased was the widow of the late
E. P. Hamm, who pre-deceased her by over thirty-two years. She was a daughter of Capt. James Fraser, of the Royal Canadian Rifles, who was stationed at Fort Henry during the rebellion of 1837, his family living with him in the fort. She is survived by two daughters and three sons: Mrs.
Norton F. Hughes, of Kingston; Mrs.
Shibley, Napanee; James Henry, of
New York; Donald, of Napanee, and J. Bailey, of Morven. Deceased was a daughter of Captain and Mrs. James Fraser, was born on July 10th, 1824, in the Township of Ernesttown. On April 14th, 1840, she was married to Ebenezer Perry Ham, of Fredericksburg, in which place they spent forty happy years of married life together.
After her husband's death, which occurred on Sept. 3rd, 1880, her home was with her youngest son, J. Bailey Ham, first in Fredericksburg and latterly at Morven, where she died.
Previous to her death her health had been remarkably good and her activities almost incessant. The end came quickly when once her condition began to cause anxiety. The services

PASTOR RUSSELL

Richmond, Va., April 6.—Bible students of all denominations were deeply interested in Pastor Russell's visit to-day. A series of special Bible lectures has been in progress for some months; and Pastor Russell has been brought here, evidently, for climactic results. We report his discourse from the text, "Come now, let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow."—Isaiah 1:18.

Although thoroughly loyal and very reverential, the Pastor has evidently cut loose from the creeds. He admitted that all contain kernels of Truth, but declared that these are buried in a mass of chaff—hidden in God-dishonoring theologies so unreasonable that their best friends prefer never to think of them.

The Pastor claimed that the repulsiveness of the creeds hinders people from looking for the truth which they contain. This is well, he said. Why should we search for Truth in various creeds when we have the Bible? He urged Christians to abandon the creeds and unite as Bible students, intent on knowing the testimony of God's Word and of obtaining the guidance of the Holy Spirit in the understanding of it. So doing, true Christians would be so united that outward forms of federation would be as useless and as absolutely ignorant as in our Lord's day.

Jesus held up to scorn the inconsistencies of His day. If here to-day, He would show us many inconsistencies in our estimation of sin and righteousness, the Pastor believed. Our Lord declared that while the religious leaders of His time were careful to tithe all their increase, they outraged the very spirit of God's law of righteousness; that in mean ways they took the bread from the poor, and to divert attention from their course they hypocritically lengthened their prayers.

It was not that praying was wrong, or that tithe was objectionable, but their recognition of these showed them all the more responsible in "devouring widows' houses," and other sharp practices, whereby they took advantage of the unfortunate. This principle still operates, said Pastor Russell. The same sins lie at the door of many professing godliness.

To-day, as in our Master's time, there is a way of keeping within the law and out of the penitentiary, while at the same time the spirit of the law is outraged and trampled in the dust of avaricious money-getting. Now, as

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 7.—Export talk and the disturbed political situation in Europe offset a number of bearish features to-day and gave a strong tone to wheat, May reaching 93c, the highest for more than a month. The net result was an advance for wheat of 5c to 13c, for corn 3c to 13c and for oats 3c to 13c, but provisions finished at a net decline of a shade to 25c.

The Liverpool market closed 14d lower to 14d higher on wheat and 14d higher on corn. Paris wheat closed 1c to 13c lower, Antwerp unchanged, Budapest 13c lower.

MONTREAL MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 7.—The foreign demand for Manitoba wheat was much quieter today and outside of a few loads which were sold for shipment in the last half of April at an advance of 3d per quarter, little business was done for future on account of the further rise in prices in Winnipeg. Cables on oats were 1 1/2d higher, but even at this improvement they were fully 6d below what exporters would sell at. A few loads of barley were sold at an advance of 3d. Coarse grains locally were quiet. Corn strong and 1c higher. Export trade in flour quiet. Millfeed and rolled oats steady under a fair demand. Butter strong with an advancing tendency. Cheese quiet. Eggs fairly active, but easy.

The Sugar Social at Brick Church, on Tuesday evening, was a splendid success. Following the feast of sugar, etc., an excellent programme was given by Napanee, Switzerville, and local talent with an address by Rev. S. T. Tucker, B.A., B.D., of Odessa. The proceeds were gratifying and everybody was delighted.

The annual meeting of the Morven Auxiliary of the W. M. S., held at the parsonage on Wednesday was largely attended and the officers for the ensuing year were elected. The auxiliary is in a flourishing condition.

The roads are drying up and the tramp fraternity are out in strong force in pursuit of their profession. A public officer on constant duty is needed on the York and Kingston road to pay his respects to these gentlemen.

Cause for Alarm

Loss of appetite or distress after eating—a symptom that should not be disregarded.

It is not what you eat but what you digest and assimilate that does you good. Some of the strongest, healthiest persons are moderate eaters. Nothing will cause more trouble than a disordered stomach, and many people contract serious maladies through disregard or abuse of the stomach.

We urge all who suffer from indigestion, or dyspepsia, to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, with the understanding that we will refund the money paid us without question or formality, if after use you are not perfectly satisfied with results.

We recommend Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets to customers every day, and have yet to hear of one who has not been benefited. We believe them to be without equal. They give prompt relief, aiding to neutralize acidity, stimulate flow of gastric juice, strengthen the digestive organs, and thus promote perfect nutrition and correct unhealthy symptoms. Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. You can buy Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets in this community only at our store:

law and out of the penitentiary, while at the same time the spirit of the law is outraged and trampled in the dust of avaricious money-getting. Now, as then, money-lovers pose as philanthropists, and hold honorable places in churchianity. The Pastor spared not this class. He declared that religious hypocrites are the worst of sinners in God's sight. Theirs were the most scarlet sins, he believed.

Greater and Lesser Sins.

Wealth covers a multitude of sins. To be financially unsuccessful is a crime, on account of which many consider a wife justified in seeking a divorce, and some churches justified in dropping the culprit from their membership list. What matters it that Jesus comforted the weary, heavily-laden and unsuccessful? What matters it that the Scriptures declare that not many rich, wise, great or learned has God called to the Heavenly inheritance, but chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith?

What matters it that a very rich man has two concubines, besides a wife? What matters it that his religious instructors know of the fact? He is a supporter of their church! Were he poor, this crime against human and Divine Law would be unforgivable. He would be assured that he would suffer torment throughout eternity!

Sins Scarlet and Crimson.

Our text discriminates between scarlet and crimson, as indicating shades of guilt in the same kind of sin. For instance, murder would be a scarlet sin, if committed by a worldly person; but hatred would be crimson—a sin of deeper dye—if cherished by a Christian. As love is the fulfilling of the Divine Law, so hatred, the most violent form of selfishness, implies its flagrant violation.

Mankind have inherited sin-tainted blood from Adam. Selfishness of varying hues stains every member of the race. Many have not the proper focus upon the Divine Law. Taking the letter of that Law, they avoid the cruder forms of theft, adultery, murder, thus making the same mistake that Israel made.

According to Jesus interpretation of the Law, theft could be committed in the heart by coveting, by stealing the business or reputation of another. Similarly, adultery might be committed without overt act; and hatred is murder.

Increase of knowledge has brought increased responsibility. But human selfishness has kept pace. The thievish spirit abounds. The civilized world should awaken its conscience to the Golden Rule—The Law of Messiah's coming Kingdom.

Ghent, in Belgium, stands on twenty-six islands connected by eighty bridges. It has many points in common with Venice.

Man and Repose.

Repose is agreeable to the human mind, and decision is repose. A man has made up his opinions, he does not choose to be disturbed, and he is much more thankful to the man who confirms him in his errors and leaves him alone than he is to the man who refutes him, or who instructs him at the expense of his tranquility.—Sydney Smith.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 7.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, receipts for week ended April 5 were 1400 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 2500 hogs and 2200 calves. The offerings for sale today were 1250 cattle, 60 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs and 800 calves.

Altho the supply of cattle was larger than a week ago there was no actual change in the condition of the market, prices being firmly maintained owing to the good demand. Sales of two full loads of choice steers, weighing on an average from 1100 to 1200 pounds each, sold at $7.20; three loads of lighter weights at $6.90 to $7, and others at $6.20. Really choice brought as high as $7.50 to $7.70 per 100 pounds. Butchers' cows sold at $6.25 to $6.75, and choice bulls at $6 to $6.25 per 100 pounds. Sheep and lambs strong with ewes selling at $6.75 to $7.25 and yearling lambs at $8.50 to $9 per 100 pounds. Demand for spring lambs was good at prices ranging from $5 to $8. The trade in calves was active, of which the receipts are increasing, but owing to the good demand for good to choice stock prices are 5c to 7c per pound.

Hogs were easier and prices about 25c per 100 pounds lower than this day week, but at this reduction the demand from packers was good and an active trade was done in selected lots at $10.50 to $10.75 per 100 pounds weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.25 to $7.75; do., medium, $5.50 to $6.50; do., common, $5 to $5.25; canners, $4 to $4.25; butchers' cattle, choice, cows, $4.50 to $6.50; do., bulls, $4.25 to $6.25; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $35; do., common and medium, each, $70 to $75; springers, $60 to $65; sheep, ewes, $6.75 to $7.25; bucks and culls, $6.25 to $6.50; lambs, $8.50 to $9; hogs, f.o.b., $10.50 to $10.75; calves, $1 to $10.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, April 7.—Cattle—Receipts 28,000. Market unsettled. Beefs, $7.15 to $9.20; Texas steers, $6.70 to $7.85; stockers and feeders, $6.10 to $8.10; cows and heifers, $3.70 to $8.35; calves, $6 to $7.50.

Hogs—Receipts 42,000. Market firm. Light, $8.90 to $9.30; mixed, $8.75 to $9.20; heavy, $8.55 to $9.15; rough, $8.55 to $8.75; pigs, $6.85 to $9.10; bulk of sales, $9 to $9.20.

Sheep—Receipts 20,000. Market firm. Native, $6.25 to $7.35; yearling, $7.25 to $8.50; lambs, native, $6.75 to $9.10.

GIVE YOUR BOY A FARM

Every farmer wants to provide for his sons, but seldom will the old homestead, developed with toil, suffice to meet their needs. The boys have been brought up to the land. They are familiar with all the phases of farming. They should have land of their own. How is the farmer going to meet this emergency?

The Logical Answer is Western Canada.

Thousands of acres, divided into 160 acre farms, are being thrown open for entry by the Dominion Government along or near the lines of the

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY.

The land gives a wide chance. There are some plots on the open prairie and others again in the well-wooded, well-watered districts in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

A large number of these homesteads are particularly adapted to mixed farming.

Write or Enquire To-day.

Any agent of the Canadian Northern Railway, or the undersigned will be glad to send, on application full information as to the location of these homesteads and the way to secure and reach them. Write for "The Bread Basket," "35,000 Free Homestead" and our Peace River Booklet. You will be interested.

JAS. MCKITTRICK,

IMPORTANT POINTS IN LAST WEEK'S LEGISLATURE

1. Government votes down all proposals for extending the franchise to women.

2. Government opposes Mr. Rowell's motion to appoint a Commission to investigate the Eight Hour Day and Minimum Wage.

3. Mr. Rowell censures the Government for their failure to inaugurate an adequate publicity campaign for the Province.

4. Sir James Whitney announces that there is no probability of a Workmen's Compensation Act this session.

5. J. C. Elliott, Liberal, (West Middlesex) introduces bill to encourage the breeding of black foxes—Second reading.

6. Hon. Mr. Hanna introduces important changes in the Marriage Act.

7. Changes in Motor Vehicles Act in Municipal Committee. Every driver, private and professional must be licensed.

LADIES ARE DISAPPOINTED.

Those women in Ontario, and there are thousands of them in every part of the Province, who want to see at least some extension of the franchise to their sex are badly disappointed at the recent action of the Legislature in voting down every variety and stage of

Bill to assist in the breeding foxes. Mr. Elliott, Liberal for West Middlesex, is one of the leading men in the House and alive to the interests of the fox. His present Bill, which is second reading, and will come in committee, allows fox to catch breeding stock at any time of the year and not only in the season as at present. The black foxes is being taken usually in various parts of the country and Mr. Elliott's Bill, if it is passed, will prove a real encouragement to foxes. Ladies must have black fox furs and they are willing to pay for them for the business.

WORKINGMEN COMPENSATION ACT

Workingmen have two complaints against the Whitely government arising from its actions.

First—Sir James Whitney, in his speech, said that the compensation act will be passed at this session at a first promised in 1908 and hanging fire ever since.

Second—In spite of the Allan Studholme, Labor M. E. East Hamilton, and of M. Rowell, the Government has not appointed a commission to inquire into the Eight Hour Day and Minimum Wage questions.

Third—Under the present Government, Australia, Great Britain, and are thousands of them in every part of the Province, who want to see at least some extension of the franchise to their sex are badly disappointed at the recent action of the Legislature in voting down every variety and stage of woman suffrage. During the debate on this subject the attendance in the galleries was as large as at the Temperance debates and standing room was at a premium. Sir James Whitney rather antagonized the ladies present by asking the Speaker in brusque terms to clear the galleries, because at one point a few women applauded sentiments in favor of woman suffrage. The Speaker smoothed down the incident.

It seems to be widely believed that the Government made a mistake in not granting some concessions. The Macdiarmid Bill had been drawn up by Hon. Mr. Hanna and every person thought that it was practically a Government measure. At the last moment, however, it was withdrawn.

The four Bills considered were as follows:

1. The Macdonald Bill—Would have given the vote to those women who now have it in municipal elections. Supported by the Opposition and Allan Studholme.

2. The Elliott Bill—In short would have granted the municipal vote to married women property holders. Supported by the Opposition and Allan Studholme.

3. The Macdiarmid Bill—Somewhat similar to the Elliott Bill except that the married women property holders would be entitled to vote only in cases where the wife asked that her name replaced that of her husband on the list. Withdrawn.

4. The Studholme Bill—Equal franchise to men and women. Supported by some private members.

Must You Be Bald?

What have you done to stop your hair from falling? Have you tried Rexall "93" Hair Tonic? If not, we want you to try it at our risk.

If you have dandruff; if your hair is falling out and your scalp is not glazed and shiny, if you use Rexall "93" Hair Tonic according to directions for thirty days, and at the end of that time you are not thoroughly satisfied with the results and will tell us so, we will immediately hand back your money. We won't ask you to promise anything. We won't even question you. We will take your mere word and return your money.

Doesn't it stand to reason that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic must be a mighty good remedy and have given great satisfaction to our customers if we endorse it like this? We know of no similar remedy that is as good. It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done for others that we back it with our own money.

Why suffer scalp and hair trouble or be bald, when Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will remove dandruff, make your scalp comfortable and healthy, promote hair growth and tend to prevent baldness—when we will pay for the treatment should it fail to please you?

We don't obligate you to anything. You simply buy the treatment; use it, and if not pleased, come back to us empty-handed—and we will hand back what you paid us. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00 a bottle. You can buy Rexall "93" Hair Tonic in this community only at our store:

BRIDGED AN OCEAN

The Lost Atlantis That Was Swallowed by the Sea.

A NATION OF MANY LEGENDS.

Plato Got His Story of the Continent and Its Ruin From Solon, the Old Lawgiver—The Theories That Were Built by Ignatius Donnelly.

Far out beyond the Pillars of Hercules, where the Atlantic ocean stretches broad and deep today, men of imagination like to believe there lies a buried kingdom. The sea was over its once fertile plains, and creatures of the deep float in and out among its topless towers. Seaweed and silt have buried its temples for 10,000 years. Here, scientists of a romantic turn will tell you, lies the lost island of Atlantis, where once there ruled the richest and most powerful of the earth, a world power while wolves still howled upon the seven hills of Rome and the glory that was Greece lay yet undreamed.

But today all that remains of the lost kingdom is a little group of islands, the Azores; mountain tops these that were not wholly overwhelmed when the proud island sank into the sea. Many years ago an Irishman, Ignatius Donnelly, who possessed an active imagination and a mind which worked along interesting and unusual lines, wrote a book about Atlantis, in which he proved, to his own satisfaction at least, that the lost kingdom really existed and was not a fable.

The earliest authentic information about this mystery land we find in Plato, who averred he had it from his grandfather, Solon, the famous lawgiver, who had spent some years among the Egyptians. Plato told of a great continent which had existed 9,000 years before lying to the west of the Pillars of Hercules and making war upon the nations to the east. Only Athens and Egypt were able to withstand the onslaughts of the Atlantans, and then suddenly, "in a day and a night," the island was overwhelmed and sank into the sea. This was the story Solon had from the Egyptians and which his grandson wrote down, and the legend has persisted ever since.

Diodorus Siculus, a Roman writer, tells how the Phoenicians discovered "a large island in the Atlantic ocean between the Pillars of Hercules, several days' sail from the coast of Africa. This island abounded in all manner of riches. The soil was exceedingly fertile. The scenery was diversified by rivers, mountains and forests. It was the custom of the inhabitants to retire during the summer to magnificent country houses, which stood in the midst of beautiful gardens. Fish and game were found in great abundance; the climate was delicious and the trees bore great crops of fruit at all seasons of the year.

Soundings made by British and American vessels have shown conclusively that surrounding the Azores there is a submerged plateau, which it

QUEER WAYS OF THE ARAB.

His Methods of Life and His Contempt For Womankind.

An Arab on entering a house removes his shoes, but not his hat. He mounts his horse upon the right side, while his wife milks the cow on the left side. In writing a letter he puts nearly all the compliments on the outside. His head must be wrapped up warm, even in the summer, while his feet may well enough go naked in winter.

Every article of merchandise which is liquid he weighs, but he measures wheat, barley and a few other articles. He reads and writes from right to left. He eats scarcely anything for breakfast, about as much for dinner, but after the work day is done he sits down to a hot meal swimming in oil or, better yet, boiled butter.

His sons eat with him, but the females of his house wait till his lordship has done. He rides a donkey when traveling, his wife walking behind. He laughs at the idea of walking in the street with his wife or of even vacating his seat for a woman. If he be an artisan he does work sitting, perhaps using his feet to hold what his hands are engaged upon.

He drinks cold water with a spoon, but never bathes in it unless his home be on the seashore. He is rarely seen drunk, is deficient in affection for his kindred, has little curiosity and no imitation, no wish to improve his mind.—Everyday Life.

of the year.

Soundings made by British and American vessels have shown conclusively that surrounding the Azores there is a submerged plateau, which it does not require much imagination to identify with the "rich plain" mentioned by Plato. From this lost continent Donnelly believed that ridges of land ran to the present coasts of South America and Africa, originally, so that before the time of which Plato wrote the eastern and western hemispheres were connected by land. Thus he accounted for many similarities in the plants and animals of the two hemispheres which otherwise are very difficult to explain.

The continent as described by Plato was mountainous, but was surrounded by vast fertile plains. It was rich in precious metals and had numerous temples and statues of gold and silver and ivory.

In the sudden and violent destruction of Atlantis, "in one dreadful day and night," Donnelly believed he saw the origin of the legend of the deluge, so universal among the followers of all religions. The Biblical deluge, the flood in which the Greeks believed, from which only Deukalion and Pyrrha escaped, the overflow which Chaldean legends tell of all these, Donnelly believed, had their foundation in the destruction of Atlantis.

Plato tells us that the race of the Atlantans had fallen from their high estate and committed sins, and the Zeus determined to overwhelm them. An earthquake preceded the sinking of the land, and there came a great storm, which brought the sea rushing in over the once fruitful land.

Before this deluge Atlantis was the greatest power in the world, Donnelly said. Not only had it made war against the infant nations of Europe, conquering France and Spain and Africa as far as the Nile, but colonies were established in Mexico, in Central America and along the valley of the Mississippi. The mound builders were colonists from Atlantis. After the destruction of the parent continent the eastern and the western hemispheres lost all remembrance of each other, as both of them at last forgot the great Atlantis, or if they remembered at all remembered it only as a legend, a faint and shadowy tradition.

Only a few of the thousands of inhabitants of Atlantis escaped, but these few carried to Europe the seeds of the white man's civilization. They settled in Egypt and in eastern Europe and were the forbears of the Aryan race.—Kansas City Star.

diners are very fond of animals and know the wants of each particular customer. One of the regular callers at the restaurant, a dog, prefers having his meals in private, so instead of eating his luncheon in the restaurant he walks from his home to the place every day, buys his luncheon and carries it home. Clogs.

Clogs, against which the Lancashire mill girls are rebelling, were at one time worn by women of all classes. The more refined variety of the clog had a thin wooden sole, which was cut transversely in two pieces, attached to each other by a hinge. Dainty brass and polished leather appurtenances gave a finish to the article. Anne Bracegirdle, the most beautiful actress of her day, was a wearer of clogs. Horace Walpole relates in one of his letters that "Mrs. Bracegirdle breakfasted with me this morning. As she went out and wanted her clogs she turned to me and said, 'I remember at the playhouse they used to call for Mrs. Oldfield's chair, Mrs. Barry's clogs and Mrs. Bracegirdle's pattens.'"—London Spectator.

GIVE YOUR BOY A FARM

Every farmer wants to provide for his sons, but seldom will the old homestead, developed with toil, suffice to meet their needs. The boys have been brought up to the land. They are familiar with all the phases of farming. They should have land of their own. How is the farmer going to meet this emergency?

The Logical Answer is Western Canada.

Thousands of acres, divided into 160 acre farms, are being thrown open for entry by the Dominion Government along or near the lines of the

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY.

The land gives a wide chance. There are some plots on the open prairie and others again in the well-wooded, well-watered districts in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

A large number of these homesteads are particularly adapted to mixed farming.

Write or Enquire To-day.

Any agent of the Canadian Northern Railway, or the undersigned will be glad to send, on application full information as to the location of these homesteads and the way to secure and reach them. Write for "The Bread Basket," "35,000 Free Homestead" and our Peace River Booklet. You will be interested.

JAS. McKITTRICK,

IMPORTANT POINTS IN LAST WEEK'S LEGISLATURE

1. Government votes down all proposals for extending the franchise to women.

2. Government opposes Mr. Rowell's motion to appoint a Commission to investigate the Eight Hour Day and Minimum Wage.

3. Mr. Rowell censures the Government for their failure to inaugurate an adequate publicity campaign for the Province.

4. Sir James Whitney announces that there is no probability of a Workmen's Compensation Act this session.

5. J. C. Elliott, Liberal, (West Middlesex) introduces bill to encourage the breeding of black foxes—Second reading.

6. Hon. Mr. Hanna introduces important changes in the Marriage Act.

7. Changes in Motor Vehicles Act in Municipal Committee. Every driver, private and professional must be licensed.

LADIES ARE DISAPPOINTED.

Those women in Ontario, and there are thousands of them in every part of the Province, who want to see at least some extension of the franchise to their sex are badly disappointed at the recent action of the Legislature in voting down every variety and stage of

Bill to assist in the breeding foxes. Mr. Elliott, Liberal for West Middlesex, is one of the leading men in the House and alive to the interests of the His present Bill, which on second reading, and will come in committee, allows fox catch breeding stock at all the year and not only in the son as at present. The black foxes is being taken usually in various parts of and Mr. Elliott's Bill, if law, will prove a real encouragement to them. There are willing to do this for them. There money in the business.

WORKINGMEN COMI

Workingmen have two complaints against the Whi government arising from its sitings.

First—Sir James Whitney them by declaring that the Compensation Act will probably be passed at this session at a first promised in 1903 and hanging fire ever since.

Second—In spite of the Allan Studholme, Labor M. East Hamilton, and of M. Rowell, the Government appoint a commission to Eight Hour Day and Minimum Wage. All these sub matters of vital importance to Ontario under the present Government is not keeping up to the advance set by the United Australia, Great Britain are thousands of them in every part of the Province, who want to see at least some extension of the franchise to their sex are badly disappointed at the recent action of the Legislature in voting down every variety and stage of woman suffrage. During the debate on this subject the attendance in the galleries was as large as at the Temperance debates and standing room was at a premium. Sir James Whitney rather antagonized the ladies present by asking the Speaker in brisk terms to clear the galleries, because at one point a few women applauded sentiments in favor of woman suffrage. The Speaker smoothed down the incident.

It seems to be widely believed that the Government made a mistake in not granting some concessions. The Macdiarmid Bill had been drawn up by Hon. Mr. Hanna and every person thought that it was practically a Government measure. At the last moment, however, it was withdrawn.

The four Bills considered were as follows:

1. The Macdonald Bill—Would have given the vote to those women who now have it in municipal elections. Supported by the Opposition and Allan Studholme.

2. The Elliott Bill—In short would have granted the municipal vote to married women property holders. Supported by the Opposition and Allan Studholme.

3. The Macdiarmid Bill—Somewhat similar to the Elliott Bill except that the married women property holders would be entitled to vote only in cases where the wife asked that her name replaced that of her husband on the list. Withdrawn.

4. The Studholme Bill—Equal franchise to men and women. Supported by some private members.

Must You Be Bald?

What have you done to stop your hair from falling? Have you tried Rexall "93" Hair Tonic? If not, we want you to try it at our risk.

If you have dandruff; if your hair is falling out and your scalp is not glazed and shiny, if you use Rexall "93" Hair Tonic according to directions for thirty days, and at the end of that time you are not thoroughly satisfied with the results and will tell us so, we will immediately hand back your money. We won't ask you to promise anything. We won't even question you. We will take your mere word and return your money.

Doesn't it stand to reason that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic must be a mighty good remedy and have given great satisfaction to our customers if we endorse it like this? We know of no similar remedy that is as good. It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done for others that we back it with our own money.

Why suffer scalp and hair trouble or be bald, when Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will remove dandruff, make your scalp comfortable and healthy, promote hair growth and tend to prevent baldness—when we will pay for the treatment should it fail to please you?

We don't obligate you to anything. You simply buy the treatment; use it, and if not pleased, come back to us empty-handed—and we will hand back what you paid us. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

You can buy Rexall "93" Hair Tonic in this community only at our store:

BRIDGED AN OCEAN

The Lost Atlantis That Was Swallowed by the Sea.

A NATION OF MANY LEGENDS.

Plato Got His Story of the Continent and Its Ruin From Solon, the Old Lawgiver—The Theories That Were Built by Ignatius Donnelly.

Far out beyond the Pillars of Hercules, where the Atlantic ocean stretches broad and deep today, men of imagination like to believe there lies a buried kingdom. The sea washes over its once fertile plains, and creatures of the deep float in and out among its topless towers. Seaweed and silt have buried its temples for 10,000 years. Here, scientists of a romantic turn will tell you, lies the lost island of Atlantis, where once there ruled the richest and most powerful of the earth, a world power while wolves still howled upon the seven hills of Rome and the glory that was Greece lay yet undreamed.

But today all that remains of the lost kingdom is a little group of islands, the Azores; mountain tops these that were not wholly overwhelmed when the proud island sank into the sea. Many years ago an Irishman, Ignatius Donnelly, who possessed an active imagination and a mind which worked along interesting and unusual lines, wrote a book about Atlantis, in which he proved, to his own satisfaction at least, that the lost kingdom really existed and was not a fable.

The earliest authentic information about this mystery land we find in Plato, who averred he had it from his grandfather, Solon, the famous lawgiver, who had spent some years among the Egyptians. Plato told of a great continent which had existed 9,000 years before lying to the west of the Pillars of Hercules and making war upon the nations to the east. Only Athens and Egypt were able to withstand the onslaughts of the Atlantans, and then suddenly, "in a day and a night," the island was overwhelmed and sank into the sea. This was the story Solon had from the Egyptians and which his grandson wrote down, and the legend has persisted ever since.

Diodorus Siculus, a Roman writer, tells how the Phoenicians discovered "a large island in the Atlantic ocean between the Pillars of Hercules, several days' sail from the coast of Africa. This island abounded in all manner of riches. The soil was exceedingly fertile. The scenery was diversified by rivers, mountains and forests. It was the custom of the inhabitants to retire during the summer to magnificent country houses, which stood in the midst of beautiful gardens. Fish and game were found in great abundance; the climate was delicious and the trees bore great crops of fruit at all seasons of the year.

Soundings made by British and American vessels have shown conclusively that surrounding the Azores there is a submerged plateau, which it or the year.

Soundings made by British and American vessels have shown conclusively that surrounding the Azores there is a submerged plateau, which it does not require much imagination to identify with the "rich plain" mentioned by Plato. From this lost continent Donnelly believed that ridges of land ran to the present coasts of South America and Africa, originally, so that before the time of which Plato wrote the eastern and western hemispheres were connected by land. Thus he accounted for many similarities in the plants and animals of the two hemispheres which otherwise are very difficult to explain.

The continent as described by Plato was mountainous, but was surrounded by vast fertile plains. It was rich in precious metals and had numerous temples and statues of gold and silver and ivory.

In the sudden and violent destruction of Atlantis, "in one dreadful day and night," Donnelly believed he saw the origin of the legend of the deluge, so universal among the followers of all religions. The Biblical deluge, the flood in which the Greeks believed, from which only Deukalion and Pyrrha escaped, the overflow which Chaldean legends tell of all these, Donnelly believed, had their foundation in the destruction of Atlantis.

Plato tells us that the race of the Atlantans had fallen from their high estate and committed sins, and the Zeus determined to overwhelm them. An earthquake preceded the sinking of the land, and there came a great storm which brought the sea rushing in over the once fruitful land.

Before this deluge Atlantis was the greatest power in the world, Donnelly said. Not only had it made war against the infant nations of Europe, conquering France and Spain and Africa as far as the Nile, but colonies were established in Mexico, in Central America and along the valley of the Mississippi. The mound builders were colonists from Atlantis. After the destruction of the parent continent the eastern and the western hemispheres lost all remembrance of each other, as both of them at last forgot the great Atlantis, or if they remembered at all remembered it only as a legend, a faint and shadowy tradition.

Only a few of the thousands of inhabitants of Atlantis escaped, but these few carried to Europe the seeds of the white man's civilization. They settled in Egypt and in eastern Europe and were the forbears of the Aryan race.—Kansas City Star.

Clogs.

Clogs, against which the Lancashire mill girls are rebelling, were at one time worn by women of all classes. The more refined variety of the clog had a thin wooden sole, which was cut transversely in two pieces, attached to each other by a hinge. Dainty brass and polished leather appurtenances gave a finish to the article. Anne Bracegirdle, the most beautiful actress of her day, was a wearer of clogs. Horace Walpole relates in one of his letters that "Mrs. Bracegirdle breakfasted with me this morning. As she went out and wanted her clogs she turned to me and said, 'I remember at the playhouse they used to call for Mrs. Oldfield's chair, Mrs. Barry's clogs and Mrs. Bracegirdle's pattens.' —London Spectator.

He was not so occupied with his thoughts, however, as to forget a plainsman's training, and during the latter half hour of his wild flower hunt he was conscious of a spy upon his trail. He had turned at some remark of his companion and had chanced to see a figure that dodged swiftly behind a boulder some fifty yards away. He had paid no special heed to the occurrence. But when it was repeated twice he became convinced that some one was watching them—why, he could not imagine. As they neared Restmore Richard wheeled suddenly and spied the figure crouching along a boxwood hedge. It seemed a very strange affair, and he determined to get to the bottom of it. So, excusing himself on the steps of the veranda, he made a circuit of the house, cut across the rose garden and vaulted a fence into the road. The hedge ended at this point, and, to the vast surprise of two gentlemen, Richard came near to landing on the head of Mr. Cornelius Van der Awe.

CHAPTER XI.

OH, it's you, is it?" said Richard, the first to recover from astonishment. "Do you know, I almost fancied it was some one with designs on the poultry."

Mr. Van der Awe flushed, drew himself up and folded his arms in a strikingly dramatic pose.

"No," he answered without the first vestige of humor; "I was not after the poultry. To be perfectly frank, I was after you."

This was another one! Was everybody lying in wait for him this morning? Could he have speech with all the world but her?

"I admire candor," coolly remarked Richard in return, "and I rejoice in the fact that your desire is gratified. How may I serve you?"

"Lord Croyland," said the dramatic young gentleman, "there is a matter which must be settled between us here and now. Upon it depends my future happiness."

"All right," responded the Texan cheerfully. "Shall it be rifles, pistols, lariats, Bowie knives or arbitration?"

Once more Mr. Van der Awe flushed. He had a faint idea that the English nobleman was laughing at him, a point on which extreme youth is sometimes oversensitive.

"I think it can be settled by arbitration," he answered coldly. "Will you kindly follow me to some less public place?"

The two young gentlemen walked up the road for a short distance, stopping at the brow of a hill which overlooked you, and I appreciate it. But would you mind telling her so?"

Richard laughed a long, free, bubbly laugh that came echoing back in merry mockery at this most ingenious proposition.

"Well, he said, "that's rather a difficult thing to do, isn't it? Strikes me as rather—er—indelicate."

"Not at all," protested Mr. Van der Awe. "Imogene is a sensible girl!"—oh, the blindness of love!—"and would understand you perfectly. You see," he explained, "she's young. Her mind, I confess frankly, is immature. She's apt to be—well, dazzled, I might say, by foreign titles and brass buttons and things of that description. It's a woman's natural instinct, you know, and I have no logical right to blame her. You see, I have reasoned it all out and am speaking from a standpoint of superior age and experience. Now, you can't find fault with that line of thought, can you?"

"Not a flaw," answered Richard gravely. "It's simply perfect. Go on."

The lover proceeded earnestly.

"As Imogene's future husband it is my duty to surround the child with every possible safeguard, and for that reason I should like her present fancy for you disillusionized. She refused to let me go with her to pick wild flowers this morning and chose you, merely, I suppose, because you are an earl. That's why I followed you. Now, I'm not asking you to do anything that I would not do for you cheerfully, and so I ask you again if you would mind dropping a rather broad hint to Imogene that a union with you is out of the question. You might explain that you are unworthy of her, or something like that. I don't care how you fix it just so it's fixed. What do you say?"

Richard thought for a little space, especially of his harmless but decided-the table the fair Imogene cast languishing glances in his direction, while on his left the ancient Miss Schermerly grew positively sprightly and covered him with a Gatling gun of perplexing questions. She wanted authentic information regarding barons, earls and noble dukes, to all of which Richard gave ready but quaint answers—answers that might have caused the English aristocracy to rise in one vast, furious mass and lynch him without formalities of trial or benefit of clergy.

"How different it is from what we read in novels," said Mrs. Renwyck. "I'm afraid our American authors are ill informed. Really, they ought to travel more."

"They travel enough, but I fancy they do not get into the best society abroad," suggested Miss Schermerly. "I shall prepare a paper upon that very subject for the Woman's Literary league. Would you have any objection, Lord Croyland, if I quoted you as an authority?"

"Not in the least," said Richard gallantly. "In fact, my dear Miss Schermerly, I should be honored—vastly so."

He smiled on himself at the thought of the real Lord Croyland should that gentleman ever chance to read the paper in question, but that was Croyland's affair, not his.

"I will bring my notebook into the library this afternoon," the ancient one stated, and, with a smile to Richard, "Could you help me then, do you think?"

"I should be most pleased," said Richard, with an answering smile, "but I fear I'm engaged to Miss Renwyck this afternoon for quite a long horseback ride. At another time I shall be charmed, I assure you."

Miss Harriet started. She was unaware of any such engagement, but somehow the idea did not displease her. She smiled and offered to release Lord Croyland, but that gentleman would not hear of it.

"By the way," said Miss Harriet in order to change the subject, "Imogene tells me that you have agreed to take part in our little play. It is awfully good of you to help us out."

"Not at all," answered Richard, with pronounced sadness. "It is a pleasure to serve you in any way."

Mr. Van der Awe in thunderstruck amazement stared blankly across the table, while his half raised fork fell clattering upon his plate.

"Oh, I say!" he began, but Richard arrested further speech by a swift glance. There was silence for a moment; then Miss Renwyck spoke:

"You don't seem to be overenthusiastic at the prospect, Lord Croyland. Don't you think the part would suit you?"

The Texan considered her words thoughtfully, fumbled for his monocle, got it into position after another gymnastic exercise with his left eye and sighed elaborately.

"The part," he stated, with a slow drawl, "is delightful as I understand it—but—shall I be perfectly candid, Miss Renwyck?"

The ladies in a breath assured him that that was just what they wished, so he continued, struggling with embarrassment:

"I've never gone in for that sort of thing—er—but once and confess with regret that I caused a fiasco. I'm very stupid at such things—really, you somewhere beyond the front gate, but on second thought changed his mind. First and he wanted information. The could be postponed. There time enough for that later.

"Well, Bills," he began, with sarcasm in his voice, "for a employed servant you seem to remarkably well."

"Yes, sir," returned the valet with the utmost complacence; "nicely, thank you." He helped to another pabulum of liquid held the glass between his hands. "This 'ere brand equal good as we 'e as on side. Your judgment's better earl's, sir. You 'ealth, sir."

Richard stuffed his clinch deep into his pockets, striving his might to keep them from prying rascal's collar. What mean? However, there was to be gained by violence, which could be learned through the use of a little tact. Therefore his rage and spoke calmly, had known the Texan better have realized that when he quiet he was most dangerous.

"Might I inquire as to the your present condition?" a master.

"Yes," answered Bills all nevertheless in quite open "me an' you 'as got to part Mr. Williams."

"Ah!"
"Yes, sir."

The murder was out. The manner of address implied things which Richard was as grasp as to appreciate the quences. Bills might drop shell in the Renwyck household mere mention of the name Williams." A confession on part would be bad enough, forced to admit the accusatory servant would be infinitesimal. Bills, too, seemed aware of it and was determined to most of it, as was shown by remark.

"Mr. Williams," he began, confidence of holding the will "I'm not disposed to make sir, though it do go against deceivin' people. I've got no ag'inst my present dooties, lams, sir, an' special so as light." Richard made no answer. Bills continued, "I might—might be indooced to stay on a small advance of two hours with a promise of another come."

"I dare say you might," Richard, with ironic calm upon the man. "Anything else?"

"Yes, sir. I fancy Mr. would do as well as that more."

"Probably," agreed Richard, richer than I and inclined to generous. Try it by all means I should hate to stand in the way of your making an honest penny."

The Texan began to understand the surprised valet stared a wonder. He had rather expected the scene, but his master's easy of the blackmailing scheme unawares. He was completely pleased by this seemingly reception of his statement. The shell, which he had charged ~~rate~~ seemed to be hanging

The two young gentlemen walked up the road for a short distance, stopping at the brow of a hill which overlooked the river. It struck Richard that this being continually led away from the house of his ladylove for secret conferences was growing rather monotonous. This was the fourth time in two days, and each excursion seemed to involve him more deeply in some quagmire of trouble. They sat down under a tree and for a time remained silent.

"Smoke?" asked Richard, holding out his cigar case.

"Thank you, no," said the young man sadly. "I have no heart for pleasure just at present. If you don't mind, we'll get down to business."

The Texan lit his cigar and expressed a willingness to open negotiations with the enemy, while the enemy collected his thoughts and dug holes in the ground with a short sharp stick.

"Lord Croyland," he began at last, "in this country openness and squareness are the first principles. I've heard that gentlemen have the same ideas in England. Is this true?"

Richard bowed.

"Very well. I'm going to ask you a plain, blunt question, without any intention of offense, and I want you to give me a straight, plain answer. Which one are you after?"

Richard's cigar nearly dropped from between his teeth, while he gazed at his questioner in extreme astonishment.

"Which one of what?" he asked when he recovered himself.

"The girls," said Mr. Van der Awe. "Perhaps I didn't put it clearly."

The Texan tried hard to conceal his amusement and succeeded imperfectly.

"Ah, I see," he returned. "Which one are you after?"

"Miss Imogene," confessed the young man without reserve, "and if you don't object to my confidence, Lord Croyland, I love her as no man ever loved a girl before. It's—it's—well, hang it, it's painful!" He fell into a thoughtful pause, then looked up again. "Now, I think I've been perfectly candid with you, and I want you to be quite frank with me. If it's Miss Chittendon we can decide what to do later."

"My dear fellow," said Richard, "you can't imagine how I appreciate your openness and squareness. It throws new light upon your glorious American people. Allow me to give you a cigar and be equally unreserved. While I admit without hesitation that Miss Imogene Chittendon is a most charming and utterly desirable young lady, I beg to assure you, sir, that never for a single fraction of a second have I entertained the least idea of—in your own phrase, of going after her. Is that satisfactory?"

"Entirely so," said Mr. Van der Awe, holding out his hand with the nearest approach to happiness he had yet shown. "I'm glad to know you in your true, real light. You are not a bit like other Englishmen I have met. Fact is, you don't even talk like one."

"Thanks," bowed Richard, prudently screwing in his monocle. The eyeglass always made him feel like an idiot; but, on the other hand, it gave a dash of local color to his appearance without which he would have been lost. "Is there anything else in which I can serve you, old chap?"

"Yes, Lord Croyland, there is. You have very kindly stated to me that you have no intention of making a bid for Imogene. That's very square of ly imprudent remarks to Miss Imogene of half an hour ago. Then he flung away his cigar and turned to his companion.

"Look here," he said, "I'm going to help you out in this matter, but I'll have to do it in my own way. I have a brilliant idea as a starter. Just listen and don't interrupt me. They're going to have a play next Friday night called 'The Man and the Hoe'—no, I beg pardon—the 'Bird.' I'm the man, and Miss Imogene is the bird. You see, the rough idea is this: I'm engaged to Miss Renwyck, but am in love with Miss Imogene to the point of frenzy—in the play, of course. So far so good. The man is in the room with the bird and declares his passion in language which is simply beautiful, making other demonstrations that are realistic both to the actors and the audience. Of course I'd rather set my heart on doing this role; but, by Jove, I'm going to chuck the thing and let you do it!"

"Me!" cried Mr. Van der Awe, clutching at his benefactor's hand. "Oh, I say!"

"Wait," said Richard. "I haven't finished yet. A young man of your obvious histrionic talent ought fairly to glitter in a part like that, and, besides, it will give you a chance to do the devoted to your ladylove. Just as you are in the middle of it Miss Harriet sails in and denounces you. Oh, it's a bully little play, especially the denunciation! But you don't mind that on account of your great and glorious love for the bird. Miss Harriet's remarks just roll off you like water from a duck's back. Touching little scene! Hanged if I can see how I can give it up, but—" He paused, sighed, then turned impulsively: "Shucks! I don't want to appear mean. The part is yours!"

For half a minute perhaps Mr. Van der Awe gazed in silence at his generous friend, beaming with gratitude.

"Lord Croyland," he murmured brokenly at last, "you're a good fellow! I'll try to do the part justice. I—I don't know how to thank you."

"I'm sure you will. Don't mention it," said Richard, with the wan smile of a complete martyr. "Let's play a game of billiards."

CHAPTER XII.

RICHARD, much to his chagrin and disgust, did not see Miss Harriet until the four ladies and the two gentlemen sat down to luncheon. To one thing he had made up his mind definitely—he would follow Mr. Corrigan's advice and brazen it out, putting his faith in luck, but helping luck along with assurance. From the opposite side of

"I've never gone in for that sort of thing—er—but once and confess with regret that I caused a fiasco. I'm very stupid at such things—really, you know, abominable. It is rather the duty of a guest to comply with the wishes of his hostess, and I feel it incumbent upon me to make a trial of the role, even if the outcome holds me up to open ridicule. We Englishmen appear a bit eccentric to Americans, I am fully aware, but nevertheless it hurts at times when—"

He paused and looked at his plate in deep confusion. Miss Harriet blushed furiously. She had wounded her guest unwittingly and was sincerely sorry. Lord Croyland, she thought, was acting very nobly in thus sacrificing himself for the sake of her foolish whims and she ought to have consulted him first of all. She made up her mind at once and turned to him impulsively.

"Lord Croyland," she said, "I beg you to believe me when I say that I never thought for an instant of holding you up to ridicule. Won't you forgive me? It was splendid of you to agree, and—there—we won't have the play at all!"

"But, my dear Miss Renwyck," Richard protested, "I should feel frightfully cut up if you abandoned it on my account. Do go on with it. Perhaps I shan't be so jolly bad after all."

All four ladies immediately took up the cudgels against him until his polite protests grew weaker and weaker, finally subsiding in a suggestion that relieved the situation from every point of view.

"Why not have Mr. Van der Awe do the part?" he asked, with a beaming smile directed at that young gentleman. "You'd do it splendidly, old chap, and I shall be uncommonly obliged to you."

Amid a chorus of approval the young lover accepted blushingly, while Richard not only freed himself of a hateful task, but became a hero and a genius in the eyes of the entire party.

As they passed out of the dining room Cornelius plucked Richard's sleeve and whispered:

"See here; I thought you said you couldn't act?"

"Can't," returned the Texan, with a sly wink. "That was what you Americans call bluff, but if you let on I'll wring your neck."

The Earl of Croyland pro tem. proceeded to his rooms with the object of arraying himself in a certain riding suit in the wardrobe of the Earl of Croyland, in actu, which would have made a cow puncher snort with disdain, but which Richard in his present state of mind rather longed for. Certainly he had no fault to find either with his prototype's taste or tailor. On entering his dressing room he was greeted by a sight which fairly took his breath away, and he was not easily surprised, either. In a corner opposite the door stood a handsome morris chair. In the chair sprawled Mr. Woolsey Bills holding a tumbler in one hand and Richard's brandy flask in the other. One-third of the original contents was still in the glass; the other two-thirds was obviously in Bills, for that worthy smiled pleasantly at his master and made no attempt to rise or to apologize for his extraordinary conduct.

Richard's first impulse was to take the offender by the scruff of the neck and kick him soundly through his host's baronial halls, repeating the attention until his valet reached a point

He paused and sighed. "And a man like you would sell himself for £200! What a pity! Have you really decided to break with me?"

"I 'ave," said the valet resolutely. A coward at heart, he had fortified his spirits with a liberal stimulant, and now, at the sting of ridicule, which galled him in a tender spot, he became rather a dangerous rascal. Whom the gods destroy they first make drunk, and the besotted Bills went sullenly to his doom.

"Look 'ere!" he cried. "You told me once you wouldn't stand no nonsense. No more will I. You got my offer—two hundred pun. Take it or leave it! "No, Woolsey," said Richard, calmly drawing on his boot, "I won't."

Bills scowled at him angrily and turned toward the door. He was drunk enough to put his threat into execution, and well Richard knew that such an exposure would be a deathknell to his hopes of winning Harriet.

"Wait!"

At the sharp command the valet turned suddenly; then his master changed his tone and continued in an even voice: "Miss Renwyck is dressing for a ride with me, and at present you can't see her. She will probably be down in twenty minutes, after which you may do as you like and be hanged to you! In the meantime I would be obliged if you would get me that small bottle of machine oil on the closet shelf; then find me a piece of soft white rag."

The valet wanted to refuse, but his servant's training, together with a certain compelling something in Richard's eye, enforced obedience. He brought one of Lord Croyland's handkerchiefs from the bureau drawer and laid it with the bottle of machine oil on a table in the center of the room. Richard thanked him, seated himself again and began tearing the handkerchief into narrow strips, while Bills stood watching him, his human curiosity beginning to get the better even of his anger.

"Sit down, Cardinal," said Richard pleasantly. "You have twenty minutes to wait, so why hurry? I have found that morris chair to be very comfortable indeed. You were enjoying it when I came in. Don't let me spoil your afternoon. Try it again."

The valet, still wondering and uncertain, took the indicated seat, narrowly watching his master while the Texan crossed the room, returning to the table with a small screwdriver and a formidable revolver. He seated himself and began taking the weapon to pieces, oiling each part carefully and then running a greasy rag through the barrel. Bills became more and more interested in this singular and to him unfamiliar proceeding, but Richard offered no explanation of his unusual occupation. After five minutes of utter silence the valet could stand the strain no longer.

"Er—beg pardon, sir," he asked, and the tremor in his voice indicated his uneasiness, "but wot are you a-doin' of, sir?"

Richard shrugged his shoulders. "Did—did you kill him, sir?" feebly began the unfortunate Bills again, feeling a sudden and unaccountable draft blowing on his spine.

"Well, no," said Richard dreamily. "I didn't. That's the funny part of it. I tied him to a tree and shot away portions of him that didn't count."

"Count, sir?"

"Yes, parts that are not vital, you understand—such as ears and fingers and kneecaps and things like that. Why, you wouldn't believe it, Bills, but you can chip away at a man for half a day if you're only careful. You see, I had plenty of leisure time on my hands—almost as much as I have now—so there wasn't any hurry and rush about it. That was a rifle. I had a hatful of cartridges and an extra gun to use when the other got too hot for quick firing. A double acting revolver is better for household use."

Once more Richard paused to laugh, twirling his gun around airily in his quick fingers in retrospective joy. "Oh, I say!" he cried. "You just ought to have heard that fellow when I began to pick off his knuckle bones. Knuckle bones, you know, seem to be very sensitive to sudden shock, and in this particular instance I had no earthly cause to complain. Perhaps you are wondering how I could shoot so accurately. Well, I'll tell you." Richard leaned forward and confided in a pleased whisper, "I had just oiled my gun."

Bills now began to sober up with astonishing rapidity. His putty-like complexion had grown grayer still, while his eyes were watery, wandering about in the fruitless hope of detecting some avenue of escape. Even his hair seemed to stir restlessly on his head, and feeling of weakness and nausea came over him.

"Wot—wot became of the gentleman, sir?" he asked, with a choky click in his voice.

"Gentleman?" repeated Richard absently. "What gentleman?"

"W'y, the—target gentleman, sir, the one as was losin' parts of 'isself that don't count, Mr. Williams, sir. I mean—"

"Oh, yes, yes!" laughed the Texan. "I was thinking of something else. You mean my contract man? I don't remember exactly. He was alive when I left him, I believe, but I rather think the crows got him in the end." There was another pause, in which Richard listened intently. "Ah!" he exclaimed. "I believe I hear Miss Renwyck coming downstairs. Hadn't you better see her before we go for our ride?"

Bills breathed hard, thought for awhile, then looked up timidly.

"M' lord?"

"Don't call me my lord," said Richard so sharply that the servant nearly fell out of his chair. "I have no right to that title now—since we've parted company. No; I'm just plain Mr. Williams, cow puncher, man eater, anything you like except an English nobleman."

"But—but—m' lord," persisted Bills, rising unsteadily and becoming the respectful servant once more. "I don't want to leave you, sir. Candid, Mr. Williams, sir, I'll serve you faithful; 'deed I will. It was only the drink wot made me forget meself, Lord Williams, sir—I mean—good Gawd! M' lord, you won't think of shootin' at my knuckle bones when I was only foolin', yours, sir."

"I know that perfectly," answered Richard pleasantly. Singular how Bills had never before recognized how pleasant his master could be! "We'll kill two birds with one stone. Not only will you break those boots for me, but per contra at the same time you may be reminded of what it means to break a contract with me. Am I clear?"

The valet sat limp and speechless. He made no move to obey the harsh command, so Richard turned on his heel, crossed to the window and stood looking out among the trees.

"Bills," he asked presently, "have you noticed how many crows are flying about the place? I never observed them before."

"Yes, yes, m' lord!" the servant gasped. "I've noticed 'em frequent, sir—an'—an', awskin' your pardon, sir, I'm ready to put the boots on."

Richard watched the operation in grim enjoyment. The fit was a tight one, but Bills accomplished the feat at last, though the perspiration came out on his forehead in copious profusion.

"Thank you," said the Texan simply and departed without giving any further directions.

He enjoyed his ride with Miss Harriet hugely. For three long, blissful hours he cantered with her on beautiful country roads, where the air was sweet and invigorating, where the scent of wild flowers came to them and the fragrance of the wild woods sweater still in the deepening dusk. A hundred times he was on the verge of confessing all, of throwing himself upon the mercy of her gentleness, but a warning something held him in check, and in spite of his impulses—like the sailor in the opera—he remained an Englishman. Once she turned to him with sparkling eyes.

"Do you know," she said, "there are times when you remind me so of a man I chanced to meet that—that—"

"The cowboy?" Richard asked.

She made no answer, but flushed and gave free rein to her eager horse, while the Texan spurred after her, laying a firm hand upon her bridle arm.

"And if I were he would it make a difference then—a difference, I mean, in winning your respect and trust, and—"

"How absurd you are!" she laughed in swift interruption. "Have I not given you both already? My cowboy is but a memory, and you—why, gracious, how late it's getting! We shall never be in time for dinner! Come!"

If Richard and Miss Harriet enjoyed their afternoon, the same could not be said of Bills. For three long hours the servant did penance for his sins, knowing not which ached the most—his head, his heart or his tender feet. To walk was agony. To sit was to suffer with a gnawing, burning heat that ever increased as his feet began to swell. At the end of the first half hour he determined to run away, to hide himself somewhere in the wilderness of New York, where his master might seek for him in vain. Immediately, however, a stumbling block presented itself. To get into the boots had been difficult. To get out of them proved to be an utter impossibility, and to run anywhere with such an agonizing handicap was out of the question. True, he might have cut them off, but in view of the thought of

"Cleaning my gun," returned Richard laconically. "What did you think I was doing—shaving?"

"O-oh!" said Bills and lapsed into silence.

Richard began to whistle. It was a merry, happy little tune, but somehow it got on the valet's nerves. His mind commenced to work and draw inferences. The gun had a very unsympathetic look, which was lessened in no degree by the six enormous cartridges that the worker placed before him on the table. He wished that the Texan had not placed himself so as to command the only exit from the room. Presently the nervous Bills spoke again. The effect of the brandy was wearing off rapidly on account of his growing fear.

"You—you don't expect to 'ave no immejut use for that 'ere thing, do you, Mr. Williams?"

"Don't know," said Richard unconcernedly. "I might, and then, again, I might not. It depends. Pretty little toy, isn't it?" Bills licked his lips and said nothing. The Texan continued: "You see, I always try to keep it in working order, because you can never tell when you've got to whip it out and get down to real enjoyable work. Why, you really wouldn't believe it, Bills, but I haven't shot a man since I left Texas—two whole weeks," he added despondently, shook his head and then began dripping oil in the pistol's lock.

"I suppose," said the valet, by way of filling in the gap of another pause, "I suppose that down w're you live, sir, they—they don't mind—er—murderin' of people, Mr. Williams, sir?"

"Shucks!" laughed Richard. "What's a man or two? A bang—a yell—and it's all over. Of course they die hard sometimes, but that's their affair."

The irresponsible person took up his whistling once more, while the muzzle of his carelessly held gun seemed to point persistently at the pit of the valet's stomach, in which, by the way, there was growing a queerly responsive feeling.

"Beg pardon, sir, but—but it isn't loaded, is it?"

"Not yet," smiled Richard. "I'll attend to that later. Besides, I wouldn't hurt you, my boy; no, not for £300—cash down."

The sum was not a large one, yet the particular amount seemed to grate upon the servant's sensitiveness. He cast a longing glance toward the door, but the Texan was already filling the chambers of his revolver, so Bills perforce sat still and watched him, experiencing a separate and distinct spasm as each cartridge nestled into its crib. Richard laughed softly, as at some pleasurable memory.

"By the way, Friend Woolsey, I don't know why I think of it just now, but a mighty funny thing happened down in Texas a couple of years ago. I had a contract with a fellow—chap about your size and age as I remember him, with a charming disregard for keeping promises similar to yours. He broke his contract."

In the awkward pause which followed the surviving partner in the deal drew a fine bead on the tassel of the window curtain and smiled.

"Where is he now, sir?"

'deed I will. It was only the drink wot made me forget myself, Lord Williams, sir—I mean—good Gawd! M' lord, you won't think of shootin' at my knuckle bones when I was only foolin', sir—when"—

"Oh, is that it?" Richard interrupted. "It was a joke, then?"

"Yes, sir."

"My! What a delicate humor you Englishmen have! Am I to understand that you will continue to be my servant on the original terms of agreement?"

"It would make me 'appy, m' lord, oh, so 'appy!"

"Very well," said Richard. "I'll give you another trial. But understand me, Bills, there must be no more nonsense!"

"No, sir."

"No more brandy?"

"No, sir."

"And you will obey me implicitly in everything?"

"I will, so 'elp me!"

"All right," smiled the Texan. "I'll give you an order as a starter. Just get those new riding boots of Lord Croyland's, will you, and put them on—break them in for me? I may be out for several hours. You will walk up and down in them until I return."

"But—but," protested Bills, "them boots is too small for you, sir—I mean, your lordship—an' my foot is bigger'n proved to be an utter impossibility, and to run anywhere with such an agonizing handicap was out of the question. True, he might have cut them off, but in view of the thought of crows and knuckle bones he preferred to bear his martyrdom.

Richard found him seated on the edge of the bathtub, with his feet in half an inch of warm water—a mutineer reduced, like his boots, to a pitiable pulp.

"Hello, Woolsey," Richard asked cheerfully, "what's up?"

"M' lord," the valet wailed, "for Gawd's sake, 'elp me, sir, for I'd rather 'ave you shoot me in the parts wot doesn't count than wear these 'ere blasted boots fer another minute, Mr. Williams, sir, if you'll be so good."

"That'll cost me a pair of boots to Croyland," thought Richard over his cigar as he dismissed the wretched valet to seek relief below stairs. "But I rather think it was money well spent."

SUMMER FABRICS.

The New Dress Goods Have Delightful Draping Qualities.

COTTON PLUSH IS SMART.

Zigzag Suiting Will Make Many of the Best Looking Tailored Costumes of the Spring—Negligee For the Easter Bride's Trousseau.

With the exception of linen, which is always the standby for the outing type of summer costume because of its fine laundering qualities and its sturdy strength of texture, everything this season is drapable. There is, first and foremost, the white cotton crepe, which leads in favor; ratine striped crepe and crepe striped with cotton velours or cotton plush or having a border of one of these materials. These new cotton pluses and velours look something like uncut velvet, and they are more attractive in the colored cotton materials than in the white, which rather suggests toweling effects to a critical eye.

Zigzag cotton suiting is the dernier cri in Paris, and this material is obtainable at most of the white sales now. It is woven from threads of graduating size, alternating thick and thin, and in the weaving the threads are pulled in the loom to give a wavy or zigzag effect to the material. A tailored suit made of this zigzag stuff in a pale tan shade is included in a trousseau of a prospective southern traveler. The suit is piped with corded lines of black satin and is matched by a blouse of all over cream embroidery mounted on cream net, the contrast of tint bringing out the embroidery design effectively. slightly. The crown and upper brim are made of white yedda. The under brim has a black velvet facing edged with knife plaited valenciennes lace. A wide piece of black velvet ribbon encircles the side crown and is finished at the left side back in a soft knot. The ends are drawn over the edge of the brim and tied again ten inches from the ends. One large red rose is secured to the right side front of the brim. A chic little hat with crown of rainproof mallines and brim of black velvet is this model by Ora Cne, the man milliner. The mallines is shirred over cable cords, which gives the effect of plaiting, and an aigrette of the mallines is the only trimming.

"Peg o' My Heart" Bows.

Last spring a flurry of fashion brought into vogue the stiff little velvet bows of color or black for shirt waists. They have been worn more or less ever since and have taken a fresh hold on popularity through the small hearts of rhinestones which are placed in the center of each bow. These are called "Peg o' My Heart" bows and with velvet ribbon and rhinestone pin cost 50 cents complete. Others contrived on the same plan are of pearls—two threadlike pearl beads through which the ribbon runs and a small pearl bail-head stickpin thrust through from the side. These are also 50 cents each and are called "Robespierre" bows. Both are pretty and an improvement over the plain velvet, which seems a trifle stiff and purposeless.

A Homemade Device.

It is interesting to see how a Japanese servant will supply kitchen deficiencies out of his own inventive brain. Where the knob on the teakettle cover had rusted and given way one of these handy persons supplied a new one by taking some heavy cords, knotting

CROCHET INITIALS.

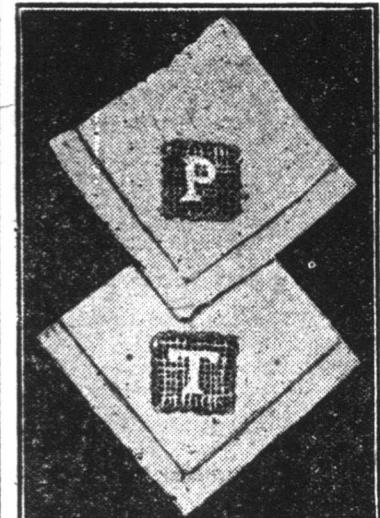

Something Quite New in Handkerchief Lettering.

A dainty way to mark handkerchiefs is to crochet very fine medallions of lace with letters in the center. Two corners of handkerchiefs are here illustrated with the letters "T" and "P" as inlets of transparent lace.

No. 26 thread is used, with a crochet hook No. 5.

First Row.—Work 39 chain, 3 treble in the ninth stitch from the needle, taking up two threads throughout the work, then 2 chain, miss two stitches, 1 treble to end of row, making eleven squares in every row.

Second Row.—Turn always with 5 chain, 1 treble on the second treble, 2

Third Row.—Work 4 squares, repeat 2 treble under two chain and 1 treble on a treble three times, 4 squares.

Fourth Row.—Work 4 squares, 2 chain, miss two treble, 4 treble on four treble, 5 squares.

Fifth Row.—Work 5 squares, 4 treble on four treble, 5 squares.

Seventh Row.—As fifth row.

Eighth Row.—Work 2 squares, 2 treble under two chain, 1 treble on a treble, 1 square, 2 chain, 4 treble, 2 squares, 2 treble under two chain, 1 treble, 2 squares.

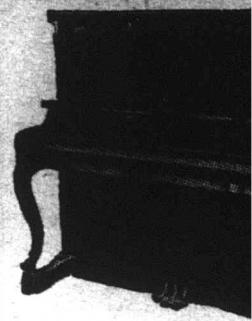

Ninth Row.—Work 1 square, 2 chain, 4 treble on four treble, 2 treble under, 1 treble on, 2 treble under, 4 treble on four treble, 2 treble under, 4 treble on four treble, 2 squares.

Tenth and Eleventh Rows.—Plain, with 11 squares in each.

These eleven rows complete the letter.

Do not turn, but proceed to work the border on all four sides, beginning on the left side of the letter.

The Border.—Put the ball of cotton through the stitch on the needle and draw it up tight. A new English walking hat of cream milan trimmed with a black shooting bow of black edged tan picot ribbon matches the suit, and boots of the new tan leather which are so easily wiped clean with soap and water will be worn with the smart street costume. These boots, by the way, are in the distinctly new and natty style, with a very low heel, long pointed toe and a top having only five buttons, like a man's boot. Completing the costume is a long handled parasol of tan silk with an inset band of ecrù colbert embroidery.

Included in the trousseau of a spring bride is this lovely negligee of machine embroidery and wide lace insertion. Two sorts of embroidery are used in combination, an open eyelet "cane" pattern and a rose design in "blind" embroidery.

YOUR EASTER HAT.

Velvet Facings on the Newest and Smartest Shapes of the Season.

The young girls have a splendid stock of hats to choose their Easter bonnet from. At this early date most of those seen are wide brimmed, with a slight flare on one side, while others have a decided roll all around, the under brim semifacing of changeable silk, the extreme outer edge being covered with straw. Most of these hats have very little trimming. Some hats have only iciencies out of his own inventive brain. Where the knob on the teakettle cover had rusted and given way one of these handy persons supplied a new one by taking some heavy cords, knotting them together, drawing them through the hole in the cover, with the knot on the under side, and tying them tight over a medium sized cork, which rested on the top of the cover in the spot formerly occupied by the knob. When far from a hardware store such a substitute is not to be despised.

Figs For Dessert.

Figs cooked tender in boiling water, with a little sugar added at the last of the cooking, are good cold with cream. The figs with the addition of wine, orange or lemon jelly, cut in cubes and whipped cream, make an elaborate dessert dish.

The Tides.

The tides are nothing but very long waves, and the manner in which they run around the earth without the water being obliged to move very far may be illustrated by laying a piece of rope on the floor and making waves run along it from end to end. The waves go all the way, but the rope lies in the same place all the time.

Odor of a Dead Stymie.

George (who is putting at the last hole with the score "all square")—Great Scott, a dead stymie!

through the next square to the corner and work 1 chain, * 3 double in this second square from the corner, 3 chain, join back to first double, 5 double in this small loop, 3 double in the next square; repeat from * to the first corner. Fill the corner loop with 6 double, then continue the border as in the illustration.

When the medallion is finished tack it crossways in the corner of a handkerchief and sew it with fine cotton along the edge of the border, bringing the needle under the chain of the border to the front, then placing it under the next chain and bringing it out on the under side of the handkerchief. Thus the medallion will be firmly sewed to the linen of the handkerchief.

When this is finished cut a square of the linen from under the lace, leaving about one-eighth of an inch from the sewing on line. Overcast this one-eighth inch very neatly, and the initial is complete.

The Letter "P."—Work 30 chain for the foundation line, then proceed as in the directions for letter "T," making 10 squares in each row and copying the number of squares and trebles from the illustration.

The Mannish Shirts.

The simpler blouses to complete the ratine and linen suit are built on the lines of the manly shirt. The majority are either plaited or tucked. A neat design calls for clusters of pin tucks edged with valenciennes lace on either side of the front plait. Another dressier model has two broad tucks edged with valenciennes lace on either side of this front plait. The soft turn-over collar and folded back cuffs edged with the lace carry out the color scheme suggested in the colored rims of the white buttons. The inevitable silk tie continues the color harmony and finishes a very dainty yet simple blouse.

Household Matters.

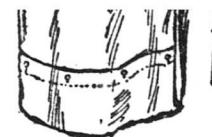

If you have a jabot which is troublesome to iron baste the plaits in before it is washed, then iron and remove the threads. Use fine thread.

Towels should not be put in the guest room when they are brand new. Use them until they have been laundered several times and lose their stiffness.

To wind a curtain remove it from the brackets, roll it up by hand and then put it into the brackets and pull it out full length. Repeat if necessary.

To Unscrew a Glass Jar.

It is often very difficult to unscrew a tin cover from a glass jar. A very simple and satisfactory way to get it off is to take a knife handle and tap the top of the cover all around the edge. This widens the thread of the screw of the cover and enables one to turn the cover very easily.

SHORT TRIALS.

How Cases Were Hustled After Dinner
In the Old Days.

In these days of criminal trials long drawn out it may not be uninteresting to glance back at a time when, in England at least, complaint ran in the opposite direction. Such were the earlier years of Queen Victoria, when the old criminal code still survived in much of its archaic barbarity, and the picturesqueness of legal procedure inadequately compensated for its cruelty.

The late Lord Brampton, better known as Sir Henry Hawkins, refers in his Reminiscences to the scandal of what he calls the "after-dinner" trials of that period. It was then the custom for the court to adjourn for dinner at five o'clock, at which meal there was no lack of conviviality; so that when Bench and Bar returned to their duties they were in no mood for protracted toil.

In Lord Brampton's own words, "Judges and counsel were exhilarated and business was proportionately accelerated." In confirmation of this he notes that these "after-dinner" trials did not occupy, on an average, more than four minutes apiece, and in illustration, cites an actual case, the paltry nature of which, contrasted with the enormity of the punishment involved, throws a lurid light on the inhumanity of the times.

The case was that of pickpocket, in which the prisoner had, inconsiderately, pleaded "Not guilty," and therefore had a right to be heard. We may quote Lord Brampton's account, beginning with the examination of the witness for the prosecution by the prosecuting counsel.

"I think you were walking up Ludgate Hill on Thursday, the 25th, about 2.30 in the afternoon, and suddenly felt a tug at your pocket and missed your handkerchief, which the constable now produces?"

"Yes, sir."

"I suppose you have nothing to ask him?" says the judge. "Next witness."

"Constable stands up."

"Were you following the prosecutor on the occasion when he was robbed on Ludgate Hill, and did you see the prisoner put his hand into the prosecutor's pocket and take this handkerchief out of it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Judge (to prisoner): 'Nothing to say, I suppose.' Then to the jury: 'Gentlemen, I suppose you have no doubt? I have none.'

"Jury: 'Guilty, my lord.'

"Judge (to prisoner): 'Jones, we have met before; we shall not meet again for some time. Seven years' transportation. Next case.'

"Time: Two minutes fifty-three seconds. As this seems to be a 'record,' it is only fair to add that the judge's name was Muirhouse."

Wanted Uniformity.

Colonel G. is a fine commander, but not a musician. He sent for the chief musician of his regimental band one day and delivered this scathing criticism:

"I notice a lack of uniformity about the band which must be regulated. Yesterday morning they were out on parade, and the largest man in the band was playing a little bit of an instrument—flute or something of the kind—and you had the big drum played by a small man. That sort of thing doesn't look well and must be attended to. I want the small men to play the small instruments, and the big men the big instruments. And

"A PECULIAR PEOPLE."

Despite Dispersion and Persecution
the Jews Remain Virile.

The Scriptures call the Jews "a peculiar people," and that they are and always have been. We are now progressing along in the 20th century of the Christian era, and shall be obliged to go back as many centuries before that date to reach the first mythical beginnings in the history of the Jew. The founder of the Hebrew race, Abram, afterward called Abraham, was an Asiatic sheik, or nomad chief. His original home was in central Asia, somewhere in the valley of the Euphrates. With his flocks and herds and some of his relatives with theirs, the wanderer took Horace Greeley's advice and set his face westward. In due time he reached the valley of the Jordan and settled there.

The descendants of Abraham got into Egypt, where for several centuries they were enslaved by the Pharaohs. From this point on we have a little more accurate account of their doings in the books of Moses, which deal with their settlement of the land of Canaan.

About the time of their settlement, or soon after, began a conflict between Asia and Europe for control of the human race and its affairs. This struggle culminated in the invasion of Greece by Aixaxerxes, and was followed by the overrunning of Asia by Alexander of Macedon, renewed in the conflict between Carthage and Rome, and kept up in the long struggle between the Saracens, Tartars and Turks with the broken remnants of the Roman empire.

During these conflicts, Canaan lay right in the path of the armies and was often the scene of bloody battles between the combatants. There is no fight in history more courageous, patriotic or dramatic than that of the Maccabees against their Gentile foes.

About the time of the appearance of the founder of Christianity, the Romans got absolute control of Judea, and the final dispersion of the Jews began. The wanderings of the race have gone on from that time to this, until there is scarcely a corner of the globe where Jews are not found engaged in all kinds of industrial activities and mental pursuits, and generally with remarkable success. The people are as peculiar to-day as when that writer of their own race placed that epithet to their credit. After a period of 4,000 years the race remains virile, prolific and progressive beyond anything recorded of any other race in the pages of history.

Their rise in intellectual acquirements as well as in that of property has been accomplished in the face of universal and persistent opposition, most unjust and cruel. A Hebrew writer says of Ishmael, half-brother of Isaac, representing Ishmael's descendants, that "his hand should be against every man and every man's hand against him." The last part of this prophecy has been fulfilled in the history of the descendants of Isaac much more than in those of his half-brother.

Russia is no different from other Christian nations in its treatment of the Jewish people, excepting in being a survival of the unkindest. From the time when the pagan Emperor Nero smeared the Jewish people of Rome with crude asphaltum and set fire to them as the first instance on record of an ornamental illumination of a city, all down through the Christian ages, the tyrant's bad example has been followed with considerable faithfulness in the treatment of the

A hard drinker was told by his doctor that he could be cured if every time he felt that he must have a drink he would immediately take something to eat instead. The man followed the advice and was cured, but the habit of asking for food had become so fixed with him that once he was nearly locked up as a lunatic. He was stopping at a hotel, and, hearing a great commotion in the room next to his, he peeped over the transom to see what the matter was. He saw and rushed madly down to the office and shouted to the clerk: "The man in 153 has shot himself! Ham and egg sandwich, please!"

them as the first instance on record of an ornamental illumination of a city, all down through all the Christian ages, the tyrant's bad example has been followed with considerable faithfulness in the treatment of the Jews. All through Europe in the middle ages, whenever a profligate, dissolute, spendthrift monarch bankrupted his own treasury he raised a loud cry against the Jews, and during the riots and murder that followed, the "peculiar people" were robbed right and left, while the Kings and their followers filled their treasury at the expense of the industrious, thrifty children of Israel. In all Europe there was no country that excelled England in this cruel treatment of the Israelites.

Changing Serpents Into Rods.

The Egyptian cobra is not unlike its Asiatic cousin except in the absence of the curious spectacle-like mark which distinguishes the latter. Although it is the most venomous reptile known to inhabit northern Africa, it is the favorite among the snake charmers. These conjurers know how to render this serpent rigidly unconscious by pressing the nape of its neck with a finger. This act appears to throw the reptile into catalepsy, in which it is as stiff as an iron rod. Traces of something similar having been practiced in olden times may be found in the Bible, where Aaron made a serpent of his rod or staff.

Train and Track.

The Erie railroad annually carries over 25,000,000 passengers and over 10,500,000 tons of freight.

On the underground railways of London many of the passenger coaches exceed the fifty feet in length.

A new German electrical device to enable a moving train to set a signal makes use of a slight sinking of a rail as a train passes over it.

In 1912 over 3,000 miles of railroad were built in the southern states, of which 348 miles were in Texas. This year some 947 miles are to be built in Texas.

Education Notes.

The course in Spanish at the Naval academy has been extended from two to four years.

State aided industrial schools are now maintained in nineteen Massachusetts communities.

Austria's eight universities had 26,332 students last year, of whom 2,130 were women. The seven technical schools had 9,920 in attendance.

Plans have been started by the Deutscher Verein at Columbia university for the organization of a union of German student societies in American universities.

Tales of Cities.

Denver is planning to hold a world's fair six or eight years hence.

St. Louis claims to lead all United States cities in dealings in horses and hogs.

St. Louis is said to profit $5,000,000 annually by the partial abatement of the smoke nuisance.

New York's municipal debt now exceeds $1,037,000,000—several millions of dollars more than the national debt.

political meetings and spoke on several occasions in the house of commons.

Household Hints.

Every kitchen should have strips of carpet placed on the floor.

A very minute amount of kerosene oil on a cloth will clean furniture.

After frying onions pour a little vinegar into the frying pan, let it get hot, and it will remove all smell from the pan.

If linoleums and oilcloths are rubbed after being washed with a little linseed oil they will be found to wear longer and have a polish without being slippery.

To dampen a cheesecloth duster with a little furniture polish is a dusting wrinkle that few know. It wipes up dust and does not simply move it on, as so many dusters do.

Sporting Notes.

About every ball club in the two major leagues seems to have put in a bid for the services of James Thorpe, the dethroned hero of the Swedish Olympic games.

Lieutenant Howard, United States navy, who has coached the academy football team to two successive victories over the Military academy eleven, has been requested to take charge of the squad for another season.

Monte Cross, the veteran infielder, has been offered the position of coach of the ball team of the University of Michigan. Branch Rickey, who coached the team last year, has signed with the St. Louis Browns to act as chief scout.

Manufacturing the Truth.

A gentleman was staying at an English country house, when, hearing a great clatter below one morning, he looked out and saw a couple of grooms holding one of the servant maids on a horse, which they led with difficulty once round the yard. He asked them what it all meant.

"Well, you see, sir," said they, "we're going to take the horse to market to be sold, and we want to be able to say that he has carried a lady."

Didn't Care For the Money.

"You advertised for a young lady to be married in a cage of lions."

"That's right. Fifty plunks. Where's your young man?"

"Don't you provide the man? What do you suppose was my object in going into this affair?"—Pittsburgh Post Too Bright.

"Didn't you win anything in your suit for damages?"

"No."

"Why didn't you engage a bright lawyer to take your part?"

"I did, but he took my all."—Philadelphia Press.

At the meeting of the council to be held to-night (Friday) the estimates for the year 1913 will be brought down and the rate of taxation fixed. Owing to the large amount of money needed in repairing the roads it may reasonably be expected the rate will be the same as last year, 18½ mills for general purposes and 10½ mills for school purposes—20 mills in all.

The ladies of the Napanee Hospital Aid will give a benefit entertainment at Wonderland Saturday afternoon, April 12th. Good pictures and special music. Mr. Foster has very kindly offered the use of Wonderland to the Aid free of charge and the entire proceeds of the entertainment will be paid on the new up-to-date sterilizer which the Napanee Aid is putting in the Hospital at Kingston. Everybody come and help in a good cause. Admission 10 cts.

The Horticultural Society has requested us to call the attention of the citizens to the serious injury that is likely to be done to the shade trees in the town through the recent breaking down of the branches unless some steps be taken to check the flow of sap from the ragged wounds. The fractured branches should be sawed off smoothly and the surface covered with a heavy coat of thick paint, to be renewed if found necessary. This remedy, if applied at once, will reduce the damages to a minimum.

The provincial member of Addington has just succeeded in getting legislation at Toronto providing a free school at Sharbot Lake for public school teachers. The school is to be supported by the province, and will be open for six weeks in the summer so that teachers wishing to improve themselves during the summer can go there and attend lectures with tuition free and without any expense for board and living. The school opens in July and lasts until nearly the time of the reopening of the public schools.—Kingston Whig.

April Rod and Gun in Canada published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., is of particular interest to the fisherman. "The Giant Trout of Nipigon" is the opening number and describes the excellent trout fishing that is to be had on this famous stream, which is probably not excelled by any other trout fishing stream in the Dominion. This is to be had on this famous stream, which is probably not excelled by any other trout fishing stream in the Dominion. Prof. Edward E. Prince, Commissioner of Fisheries, contributes an article on "The Pearlsides: A Luminous Fish New to Canada." "The Amateur Fisherman—Also His Wife" is a humorous sketch of a day's fishing that proved disastrous alike to the fisherman's tackle and to his temper. Fishing stories from British Columbia, Alberta, Cape Breton, Ontario, etc., serve to maintain the representative character of the magazine while other topics including another article on the fox industry and number three of the series "Small Fur Bearers and How to Take Them," give variety to the issue in which they appear.

Napanee Ladies Musical Club.

The ninth regular meeting of the Ladies Musical Club will be held this (Friday) afternoon at 4.15 o'clock. The programme will be arranged by Mrs. John Geale Daly, Mrs. Cameron Wilson and Mrs. Franklyn VanLoven.

Memorial Window.

A beautiful window has been placed in the East end of St. Thomas' Church, Morven, in memory of the beloved rector, the late Rev. F. T. Dibb, Rural Dean of Lennox and Addington, who erected the church. The design is a representation of "The Resurrection." The work was executed by J. C. Spence & Sons, of Montreal, who are noted for their skill in designing and painting windows.

Mrs. James Brandon and Mrs. A. T. Ruttan desire to express their thanks to the many friends of the late Rev. Rural Dean Dibb, who so kindly assisted them in erecting the beautiful window in his memory, in St. Thomas' Church, Morven.

Organ and Song Recital.

The musical event of the season will be the joint recital in Grace Methodist Church, on Wednesday, April 23rd, when Mr. Albert D. Jordan, organist, and Mr. Robert Habbeshaw, tenor, will give an interesting program. The Brantford Courier says of Mr. Jordan: "Mr. Jordan is without a peer as solo organist in this country—in fact he has few superiors anywhere. The programme he played last night was a most diversified one and called for virtuosity of the highest order. And Mr. Jordan was not found wanting in a single interpretation." Mr. Jordan takes his art seriously and never abuses the instrument for the sake of obtaining spectacular effects. Mr. Habbeshaw is an English tenor possessing the smooth quality of tone which is so rarely found in our native tenors.

Captain Lawrence Oates, of the Inniskilling Dragoons, who died with Capt. Robert F. Scott, on his ill-fated Antarctic expedition, had lost both his feet from frost-bite before he stumbled out of the tent to his death on the stumps of his legs, according to a letter to Capt. Watson, the agent of the Imperial Service Guild at Wellington, N. Z. who says he makes the revelation on the authority of Commander Evans.

SPRING 1913

We are pleased to announce that we have been appointed sole representatives in Napanee for the House of Hobberlin, tailors to the Canadian gentleman. This firm we have been informed employs a most skillful and artistic designer to whom they pay the modest sum of $8000 per annum. Their sample outfit is the most elaborate we have ever seen from any house doing a special order business. We KNOW their Cloths are of a high order and the range embraces every line that a good dresser could desire. They absolutely guarantee every garment they turn out to be perfect in fit and workmanship. Money back if not satisfactory, and no grumbling. What more could any man ask. We would be delighted to show their range of samples to any man contemplating the purchase of a new suit. If you order and the garments are not entirely satisfactory to YOU it will cost you nothing whatever but the time you spent in making your selection. We know of no fairer way of doing business.

Samples are now ready for inspection at
